Harassing Mr. Hoover
Prohibition Suggestion
Fliers and Flying
Too Many Potters

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, Great Engineer, has been busy since his inauguration by prohibition problems.

Now he is asked to develop and enforce new blue laws. The blue law gentlemen want Washington made into a "blue-law-paradise," that the city may be an example to the nation.

Poor President Hoover, listening to six speeches in favor of Sunday blue laws, all in one day, must wonder when the country will allow him to do some engineering.

After all, preventing Sunday golf in the District of Columbia is NOT as important as the Boulder Dam or Flood Control.

Little Mrs. Kao, wife of San Francisco's vice-consul is accused of bringing in eleven trunks, thousands of little tin boxes full of opium, worth $1,000,000.

The little lady cannot think what enemies could have put that opium in her trunks.

The Chinese government, not very sentimental, requests Uncle Sam to return the lady to China, promises to have her executed.

That is the Chinese penalty for opium smuggling.

We might try that in our prohibition crusade. Rows of bootleggers' skeletons swinging from the gallows, with chains clinking on their fleshless bones ought to have some effect.

Williams and Yancey, American New York to Rome fliers, bought new clothes in Rome, and visited Mussolini. He kissed them both, surprising those primitive Americans.

In the excitement of the moment, they said they would go home, fly the Pacific and get the $50,000 prize offered for a Dallas to Hong Kong flight.

A few years ago Lord Northcliffe was offering $50,000 for a flight across the English channel.

The Boeing Air Transport Company, first flying unit that C. E. Mitchell's $100,000,000 National City Bank concern absorbed, plans a 30-hour transcontinental air service—all airplane, no railroad—to include Seattle and the northwest coast.

Lindbergh, who manages General Atterbury's transcontinental line for the Pennsylvania and Santa Fe roads, predicts "flying pullmans." That will come.

The late Mr. Carry, president of the Pullman company, had his engineers working on that problem.

A passenger, eastbound, by the Pennsylvania airplane and railroad route, is making the trip from the Pacific coast to England in eight days, a new record.

Russia, to let the world know she is not standing still, sends a giant, all metal monoplane flying, non-stop, from Moscow to Berlin, and then all over Europe, Paris, Rome, Vienna, etc., carrying passengers and reporters.

A German plane flies, using heavy oil for fuel. That may be more important to aviation, than more sensational performances.

Mr. Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, tells the Potters' Union: "Since machinery makes fewer potters necessary, it will be necessary to reduce the working week to less than five days."

Mr. Woll says: "Organized labor has to exist, even if its income is lowered by machinery."

Organized labor may have to perform some different kind of labor. When locomotives came in, for instance, no arrangement was made to let stage coach drivers continue driving their stage coaches. When automobiles came, "hack drivers had to learn to drive automobiles."

The Prince of Wales knows that California produces able girls. He watched Helen Wills play a private match against a first-class British male player.

The California girl won, 6—3, 6—4.

Spaniards used to say they sent the sunshine of Spain to the foggy British Island in bottles, most and sherry.

California ships her sunshine to Great Britain in very attractive and vigorous packages.

Mrs. Katherine Tingley, energetic and a Theosophist, is dead, aged 79.

A brilliant woman, she adopted Eastern ideas and believed that her mode of life and thought would produce a long physical existence.

Many a woman has lived much longer, with nothing more esoteric to help her than a Baptist hymn book, an occasional prayer meeting, and a little mild gossip.

Dr. Eckel, of Buffalo, says daily excitement affects the mind, even producing blindness.

Daily excitement, on the other hand, stimulates the mind, and makes men use it.

Without excitement, such as attacks by men and bears from the other valley, we might all be living now in our original

Reinhart and Mendell Aim for the 300-Hour Mark; Get a Bath

Culver City, Cal., July 12 (INS)—Sixty-eight hours beyond the world's endurance record, Pilots L. W. Mendell and R. B. "Pete" Reinhart hummed overhead today toward the 300-hour mark in their sturdy, second-hand biplane on their time-defying flight.

When the hands of the official chronometer at the airport crept past 7:30 a. m. (Coast Time), 11:30 a. m. Boston daylight saving time, the intrepid pair entered their 242d hour of continuous flying.

If they stay up until 11:30 Sunday night they will pass the 300-hour mark.

Freshened by a bath—their first since leaving the ground, July 2, Mendell and Reinhart were reported to be in "very good spirits."

The degree of isolation afforded by their flight provided insufficient privacy for them to take a bath without curtains for the cabin

Tokio Cabinet and General Staff Act to Protect the Nationals if Russians Attack

Tokyo, July 12 (AP)—The Japanese Government today anxiously scanned news from Harbin and considered measures to be taken should a crisis arise.

Officials, admitting the situation was most grave, expressed the opinion that Soviet Russia was not likely to resort to arms to regain her position in North Manchuria.

Nevertheless both Cabinet and general staff considered the Manchurian question and it was thought significant that after the Cabinet meeting Premier Hamaguchi detained Foreign Minister Shidehara for further discussion.

A government spokesman emphasized that Japan, while maintaining strict neutrality in the Chinese-Russian difficulties even if there should be actual hostilities, would resolutely protect Japanese lives and legitimate interests.

It was stated that this protection

Textile Workers Plan to Ban Night Operation and Get Pay and Half Overtime

New York, July 12 (AP)—Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, announced today his organization would start immediately a campaign for a 48-hour week, gradual abolition of night work, and time and a half pay for overtime among the cotton mill workers of Fall River.

Twenty-five thousand workers in Fall River will be affected, McMahon said. The United Textile Workers executive board, in a three-day session, which started here Thursday, voted to start the campaign.

Details of the campaign, McMahon said, will be worked out by himself, as president, with Francis J. Gorman, vice-president, and John L. Campos, the Textile Workers' representative in Fall River.

Cudahy was arrested early today after his automobile had collided with a machine driven by Charles P. Lang of Eagle Rock, Cal. Cudahy was unhurt. Lang received minor injuries.

Mexico Holds Control of Catholic Churches

Mexico City, July 12 (AP)—The Mexican treasury department has issued a list of regulations for the care of the Roman Catholic churches in Mexico, containing some sections considered as rather stringent.

In the preamble the churches are referred to as the property of the nation, for the preservation of which the priests are regarded as responsible.

The regulations specify the churches are to be considered in the same category with other public buildings and the treasury and interior departments are to have supervision of their care. Repairs may be made at the expense of the church but cannot be carried out except by government permission.

The provision that the churches are national property has been one of the chief bones of contention in the Mexican church state controversy, a phase of which was settled recently.

Mary Howe, 18-year-old Colby College sophomore, and her dog, Mack, missing from North Pepperell. They are being sought by Yankee Division troops at Camp Devens and by police of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut and New York. The girl's father, wealthy Pepperell dentist, fears she ran away with the idea of going to the far west to take up ranch life for which he says she had expressed much liking after much reading about it in story books and magazines. Her mother is dangerously ill at the family home in Pepperell

POLICE OF 4 STATES JOIN IN QUEST

Father of Mary Howe Fears She Ran Away to the Western Plains

National Guardsmen combed the woody swamplands along the Nashua river in Pepperell and Ayer today while police of four states sought some clue to the mysterious disappearance of Mary Howe, 18-year-old Colby College sophomore, gone from her North Pepperell home since Wednesday noon.

A party of about 90 soldiers of the 26th Division, encamped at Devens, resumed their woodland search interrupted by darkness last night, while police of cities and towns throughout Massachusetts, Northern Connecticut, Southern New Hampshire and New York State were on watch for the missing girl.

The search took a new turn this morning when, as the soldiers again entered the Ayer and Pepperell woods, Dr. Edward L. Howe, the girl's father and wealthy dentist, appeared at Worcester police headquarters and appealed for more aid in the hunt for the college sophomore, who took her pet collie dog, "Mack," with her when she disappeared.

FATHER NEAR COLLAPSE

He told Worcester authorities he was convinced the girl had run away from home and was not the victim of foul play or accident. He was haggard and near collapse from worry and lack of sleep and drove on towards Springfield after making his appeal.

Telegrams were sent by Worcester authorities to police at Springfield, Pittsfield, Albany, Hartford, Holly, N. H., and other cities through which the girl might pass, either on foot or in an automobile "hitch-hiking."

Not satisfied, however, that the girl had left the vicinity of her home, Police Chief Robert Farrell prepared to conduct his own search of the dense woods in Pepperell, in Ayer and over the New Hampshire line in Hollis.

He intended to ask the aid of the state police at the Lunenburg barracks.

Dr. Howe said that his youngest daughter had what almost amounted to a mania for ranch life and the Western plains, and that he believed she may be headed west to some ranch.

Since her return from Waterville, Me., this spring she has given most of her time to nursing her mother, who is seriously ill, and for some time past, according to her father, had displayed emotions that might indicate she was on the verge of a nervous disorder.

TOOK ONLY $25

Arrayed against the theory that she was running away from home, however, was the fact that she took with her only $25, although she had several hundred dollars available in her own right.

National Guardsmen who tramped through the woods yesterday discovered tracks at first believed to have been made by the girl and her dog, and recovered a handkerchief which Dr. Howe felt sure was the property of his daughter.

Police learned, however, that the girl was seen Wednesday night, with her dog, in Ayer, about 200 yards beyond the Ayer sq., on the road to Camp Devens. She is not known to have had any acquaintances at the camp and her father believes

Poli, Theater Owner, Sued for $1,300,000

New Haven, July 12 (INS)—A suit asking judgment of $1,300,000 from Sylvester Z. Poli, retired theatrical magnate, was filed in United States district court here today in behalf of Edward P. Egan of Easthampton, Mass., and Pasquale Breglion and James A. Mahoney of Springfield.

The three men allege they were hired by Poli to sell a chain of theaters in Connecticut and Bay State cities; that after the plaintiffs had engaged in negotiations with the Fox theatrical interests, Poli ordered them not to continue, and that finally Poli negotiated with and sold his chain to the Fox interests.

"A fair and reasonable commission" was to have been paid the plaintiffs," the writ says, "if he sold his properties to a purchaser to whose attention the plaintiffs had brought said properties. The properties were sold on July 24, 1925, for $36,000,000." The suit asks that damages bear interest from that date.

CANADA TO BAN RUM TRAFFIC

Ottawa, Ont., July 12 (INS)—The Canadian Government has decided to bar liquor exports from Canada to the United States, it was intimated in Cabinet circles here today.

Impressed by the seriousness of the dry blockade established on the Detroit rivertront by the U. S. enforcement agencies, the MacKenzie King administration plans the introduction of legislation into the House of Commons to prevent Canadians from shipping liquor into the United States. No steps will be taken, however, until next January.

'Land' Mirages Fooled Williams and Yancey

ROME, July 11—Last night, after we arrived in Rome, we stayed up chatting until 2 o'clock, telling our many friends here the details of our flight to Santander, Spain, and the day's journey, after refueling, to the Eternal City.

Even before we hit the Spanish coast, we saw several mirages and many times were sure we saw land. What we saw seemed as real as Coney Island, with its sandy beach, its rollers and breakers. Yet we were hundreds of miles from Portugal or Spain.

Once we were sure land was ahead of us, just at the horizon, and headed straight for it. Soon afterward the land, the rollers and the beach vanished as in a moving picture shot, and we had only clouds to gaze upon. Everything had been she was merely passing in that direction.

Failure of the dog to return home has given rise to much speculation, at first along the line of foul play or an accident, but Dr. Howe pointed out today that if his daughter had decided to leave her home, "Mack" would accompany her anywhere she went.

HAD SIX PONIES.

The Howe home is a huge Colonial farmhouse on a hilltop in North Pepperell, and from its rear the New Hampshire hills are visible. The girl owned six Shetland ponies which she rode about the countryside and at times to Ayer.

Although police learned that she had a discussion with her 20-year-old sister, Marguarite, shortly before she dropped from sight, they are not inclined to believe she left home because of it.

The girl bore an excellent reputation both in her home community, where she was exceptionally popular, and at college where she was an excellent student. She is unusually attractive, rather short and stocky, with bobbed black curly hair.

When she left home, informing her family she was "going for a walk with Mack," she wore corduroy breeches, a white shirt and tan shoes, and was hatless.

If she decided to leave home, police believe it likely she reached this decision after starting on the walk, for she made no adequate preparations as to funds and clothing, and both were available without the necessity of arousing the suspicions of the household.

The runaway theory was the strongest held by the authorities today, following Dr. Howe's disclosures to the Worcester police.

There was still a possibility that the girl had met with an accident in the woods, they admitted, but foul play as an explanation of her disappearance was hardly plausible.

A report that Mack had similarly disappeared once before was denied by police and by members of her family.

CONFER OVER SEIZURE OF SCHOONER

Officials Cautious in Case of Alleged Rum Boat Taken by the Coast Guard

An international controversy, resulting from the seizure of the Canadian schooner Marenllendle by coast guard destroyer Henley, was forecasted today as Government officials went into conference in the office of the collector of the port.

Present were Collector W. W. Larkin, U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr, Special Deputy Collector Thomas Finnegan and Capt. Eugene Blake, Jr., commanding the eastern division of the coast guard.

The schooner, with a cargo of 1000 to 1200 cases of liquor aboard, was seized by to Henley off Cape Cod, and towed to Boston harbor, where both craft were anchored off Bird Island flats.

An armed guard from the Henley was placed aboard the Canadian schooner pending the result of the conference. It is understood the coast guard officials contend the Marenllendle was a well-known rum-runner, which for a year and a half has been landing cargoes on Cape Cod and in New York.

On the other hand it was said the Canadians can contend they were driven inside the limit by fog and the craft was making its way to see again when overhauled by the destroyer.

It was reported that officials were proceeding slowly as a result of the controversy which arose over the sinking of the I'm Alone, Canadian rum-runner, by a patrol boat. Coastguard officials claim the Marenllendle is a well-known rum-runner which for a year and a half has been landing cargoes on Cape Cod and in New York.

BENNIE HALTS DIVORCE SUIT JUST IN TIME

Ma Can't Put Anything Over on Pa While He Is Hanging Around

Chicago, July 12 (AP)—Little Bennie Welzer's parents, Isaac and Lena Welzer, came from Russia 26 years ago and have clung tenaciously to many old world standards, but Bennie is an American. Being an American, he knows about divorces.

A process server visited Bennie's home a month ago with a paper for Bennie's father; a paper notifying him that Mrs. Welzer had started suit for divorce.

Bennie intercepted the summons. He did not want his parents divorced.

The child noted that the case was to be called yesterday, so yesterday Bennie skipped school, slipping down to Judge Gemmill's court and into a rear seat.

Pretty soon he saw his mother take the witness stand. He heard his mother say her husband had beaten her and threatened her with a pistol. He heard two other women corroborate the story.

Judge Gemmill was on the point of signing the decree when he noted a little hand waving frantically from the rear of the courtroom. Bennie was trying to attract the court's attention as he would the teacher's at school. Judge Gemmill called him forward.

"That's my mother," said Bennie. "She is not telling the truth. My father is a kind man. He does not know what she is doing. I do not want her to get a divorce."

Judge Gemmill told Bennie to run and get his father. On the way from the building his mother seized him to punish him for interfering. He returned soon with his father, and told of being beaten by his mother.

The court refused the plea for divorce and said he would send Mrs. Welzer to jail for six months if she beats Bennie again.

MEN AT CUNARD DOCK STAY OUT

Striking longshoremen at the Cunard docks, East Boston, are still out, despite the fact the Cunard company has agreed to have to have reached a satisfactory agreement with the officers of the longshoreman's union. Union officials vainly tried to persuade the men to return to work today.

The situation in East Boston is causing much unrest in shipping circles. It is feared the local strike may become general and tie up all shipping in Boston.

Two freighters of the Brocklebank line are tied up at the Cunard pier awaiting the return of the longshoremen. The Cunard liner Scythia, which returned to Boston from New York to pick up 483 passengers, will get away on time, according to officials of the company, who declare provisions have been made for the loading of freight.

The strikers declare luncheon time and other betterments have been taken away through them. There was also a dispute over the compensation for loading the Cunard liner Scythia on Sunday.

The trouble started yesterday, when the longshoremen, nursing real or fancied grievances, refused to unload the freighter Maheser. Another Brocklebank freighter, Malakand, which arrived today, also tied up.

Union officials hope to persuade the men to return to work today.

Father of Serial Movies Dies in West

Los Angeles, July 12 (INS)—Forgotten by a public which once acclaimed him, Francis J. Grandon, 50, "father of serial motion pictures," lay dead today in the county hospital here. He succumbed to paralysis.

Grandon lifted many actresses and actors, among them Pearl Pickford, from obscurity to stardom as a director for old-time companies that now are defunct, including Biograph, Imp, Lubin, Griffith-Triangle and Selig. At one time he directed Mme. Petrova.

the Government's liquor exports policy have deluged the McKenzie King administration with protests against the shipment of liquor to the states.

William D. Euler, minister of national revenue, could not be reached for confirmation of the new policy of the government. Euler recently told the House of Commons the Canadian government had done much to assist the United States in keeping out export liquor but did not feel disposed to go further until the United States exhibited a sincere effort to block rum running.

The dry blockade, which has reduced liquor smuggling to a mere trickle and which has resulted in shootings and invasions of Canadian territory that threatened international complications, has alarmed the McKenzie King administration and caused a sudden change of attitude, observers declare.

GUNMEN HEM IN STRIKE AGENT

New York, July 12 (AP)—John F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, said today that the lift of John A. Perl, textile workers' representative in the strike district at Ware Shoals, S. C., was threatened last night by 25 gunmen who surrounded his hotel.

McMahon said the sheriff went to Perl's assistance and escorted him out of town and that Perl today went to the office of Governor Richards in Columbia to make a complaint.

Perl will appear tomorrow, McMahon said, before the textile workers' executive board, now in session here.

Gangland Reprisals Awaited by Police

Hoping that, through them, the whereabouts of their wto accomplices might be learned, detectives today held under close surveillance two gangsters of the four believed to have kidnaped and murdered 10-year-old Salvatore Damore of the North End.

One of the pair followed by detectives lives in Revere but frequents a "hangout" in the North End. The other lives in the North End and spends considerable of his time in the same place.

According to police, the two are walking the streets boldly, apparently convinced that no one will dare give information against them.

If the two men being trailed do not make contact with the other two, the first pair will be arrested anyway and grilled in the slaying, according to the detectives.

A mystery trip to an unnamed destination was made today just before dawn by Capt. Arthur McDonnell, Detective Sergt. Robert Mooney and Special Officer Mark Madden. They left the Hanover st. station at 3:45 o'clock and returned after several hours had expired, but they declined to reveal where they had been or why they had gone out together.

Meanwhile today, Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley, Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frederick T. Doyle and Inspector Joseph Cavagnaro were in consultation in the Suffolk prosecutor's office, following a meeting with Essex County officials and a visit last night to the marsh in Saugus where the murdered boy's body was found.

Although they refused to go on record as believing that Damore, Sr., is trailing perpetrators of the crime with the idea of of executing his own vengeance, the police were frank today in declaring that they anticipate one or more new deaths before the case goes into the files.

"There will be another killing soon. Then we'll know who killed the boy," a veteran officer, long acquainted with the gangland code of "an eye for an eye," told newspapermen.

The theory that "black hand" gangs will reap a harvest as a result of the fear which the Damore case has caused to be spread through the section was almost unanimously expressed today by investigators. These "blackhanders," named after the gangs which preyed on wealthy residents several decades back, pick as their victim bootleggers, storekeepers, professional men and cafe owners, taking regular fees for protection from molestation, much on the lines of the Chicago workings, police said.

North End residents who suddenly appear with new automobiles often are called upon to pay an unofficial "excise" tax to the gangs, it was declared. In the case of Damore the gang found a man with a ban, account, as revealed yesterday, of $6000. Salvatore, renowned among his friends as a champion pigeon shooter, was the "apple of the father's eye." To take Salvatore away and telephone to his father for ransom money seemed easy to the gang, according to official reconstruction of the crime.

At 10 o'clock on the night of June 20, Salvatore had not appeared back home, although it was not unusual for him to be out that late.

At 10:10 o'clock, his father was in the police station reporting his disappearance. Sergt. Shorey, on desk duty, noticed that he was nervous and rather excited. When he suggested that Santos wait until the next day before becoming alarmed, Damore insisted upon giving a description of the lad and having it broadcast.

Damore had never admitted receiving any telephone message, but claims that the only communications from the gang to him were the three letters. But police are speculating why Damore felt it necessary to make a report at the police station soon after 10 o'clock that night. They also wonder if Damore's action in reporting the boy's loss served to seal the lad's doom.

BILLS NOT LOCATED

Taking of the numbers of the bills, an exacting task, as there were nearly 50 of them, may have been reported to the gangsters before or after Damore made the appointed cache.

Not one of the bills has appeared in circulation in Boston, according to the police, who say that the publicity about the murder has caused bank clerks in all sections to be unusually vigilant.

Damore, it became known today, did not mortgage his home, as first reported to the police, but stripped the joint bank account of the family of $5800, leaving a balance of but a few hundreds, scarcely enough to pay for Salvatore's funeral.

WOMAN KILLED IN EVERETT

An aged woman, who had not been identified, was killed shortly before noon today at Broadway and Hancock st., Everett, by an automobile truck owned by the Kampion Creamery and operated by Robert Cavanaugh of Paris st., Everett.

The left rear wheel passed over her body. She was removed to Malden Maternity Hospital by Philips Eastman of Grove st., Chelsea, in his automobile and pronounced dead upon arrival.

Later her body was removed to an undertaking establishment. She wore a blue silk flowered dress, blue coat, blue hat, gray sweater, tan stockings and black shoes.

would not be confined to the South Manchurian Railway zone but would be extended to Harbin if necessary, since the large Japanese community there has considerable holdings.

Advices from Changchun state the Chinese have completed taking over the railway works there and have arrested several Soviet officials, sending them to Harbin.

CALL SOVIET RESERVISTS

Soviet reservists in the Chinese eastern railway zone are reported to have received orders to join the forces in Siberia.

According to Japanese military intelligence Soviet Russia has an equivalent of six divisions along the Siberian railway between Lake Baikal and Vladivostok, including cavalry, artillery, tanks, air craft and railway engineers. Chinese troops in Manchuria are estimated to be an equivalent of fifteen divisions.

China Prepared to Resist an Invasion

Harbin, Manchuria, July 12 (AP)—Northeastern China boiled today in a ferment of Sino-Russian antagonism, which admittedly may have the gravest consequences.

Harbin itself spent a night bordering on panic, with near riots and wild scenes occurring every time a train departed on the Chinese Eastern Railway, seized by the Chinese authorities.

Russians fought with Manchurian police in many parts of the wealthy province, and there were reports here Soviet troops in Eastern Siberia were ready to move eastward into Manchuria at a moment's notice.

Chang Ching-Hui, governor of the Harbin district, handed B. N. Melnikov, Soviet consul-general, passports for the expelled Russians M Emshanov, manager of the railway, was confined to his residence under heavy guard after being forced to give up his post.

Fan Chih-Kuang, a Chinese, was appointed to replace him, the new manager issuing a statement in which he said the expelled Russians would be replaced by Russians naturalized as Chinese or by white Russians. It was even reported M. Ostroumove, manager of the railway in Czarist days, would become manager.

Ex-Finance Minister Gets 2 Years in Jail

PATHFINDER TO HOP TO PARIS

Rome, July 12 (AP)—Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and Roger Q. Williams, accompanied by Undersecretary Balbo and Commander Francesco de Pinedo, inspected the transatlantic plane Pathfinder today with a view of making a trip to Paris shortly for a reunion of the "Old Orchard Club."

The Americans want to keep their promise to the French fliers, Assolant, Le Fevre and Lotl that they would have a reunion in Montmatre if both crews crossed safely.

Next week the men will go to England, will have their plane crated and will then sail for home. The fliers also hope to drop at Bologna to visit Maj. Ferrarin, noted Italian flier, who is in a hospital there after a minor operation.

windows, it was revealed in a note from Mendell, which said:

"Tried to take a bath, but four airplanes flew by and had to quit."

The fliers seemed bent on setting a record that would discourage other seekers of the endurance honors.

They passed the previous mark of 174 hours 59 seconds Tuesday afternoon. Since yesterday morning, however, they have been sticking close to the airport, probably because of the N. A. A. requirement that to make an official record a plane must land at the airport from which it takes off.

During the monotonous days and nights of circling the fliers have covered about 18,500 miles.

MILLIONAIRE BACKER.

Discovery was made that Paul Whittier, one of the backers of the flight and pilot of the refueling plane, is a "millionaire pilot." He is son of the late Max B. Whittier, Southern California oil magnate, he is many times a millionaire by inheritance. He flies for "the love of it."

A. E. McManus, partner with Whittier and W. G. McAdoo, Jr., in the Culver City airport, was a lieutenant in the Royal Air Corps during the World War. He is well known in Toronto, Can. He praised the military training received by Mendell and Reinhart as playing a large part in their success.

BRIDGE HALTS DIVORCE SUIT

Ma Can't Put Anything Over on Pa While He Is Hanging Around

Chicago, July 12 (AP)—Little Bennie Welzer's parents, Isaac and Lena Welzer, came from Russia 26 years ago and have clung tenaciously to many old world standards, but Bennie is an American. Being an American, he knows about divorces.

A process server visited Bennie's home a month ago with a paper for Bennie's father; a paper notifying him that Mrs. Welzer had started suit for divorce.

Bennie intercepted the summons. He did not want his parents divorced.

The child noted that the case was to be called yesterday, so yesterday Bennie skipped school, slipping down to Judge Gemmill's court and into a rear seat.

Pretty soon he saw his mother take the witness stand. He heard his mother say her husband had beaten her and threatened her with a pistol. He heard two other women corroborate the story.

Judge Gemmill was on the point of signing the decree when he noted a little hand waving frantically from the rear of the courtroom. Bennie was trying to attract the court's attention as he would the teacher's at school. Judge Gemmill called him forward.

"That's my mother," said Bennie. "She is not telling the truth. My father is a kind man. He does not know what she is doing. I do not want her to get a divorce."

Judge Gemmill told Bennie to run and get his father. On the way from the building his mother seized him to punish him for interfering. He returned soon with his father, and told of being beaten by his mother.

The court refused the plea for divorce and said he would send Mrs. Welzer to jail for six months if she beats Bennie again.

Brookline's Tax Rate Has Been Reduced $1

Although the town of Brookline will spend $300,000 more than it did last year, the tax rate, $19 per $1000, is $1 lower than it was last year. The increased assessed value of property and a large sum of "free" money in the town treasury makes the reduction in the tax rate possible.

The total expenses of the town for the coming year are figured at $4,872,122.21. Income from the state and from poll taxes is estimated at $1,224,582.21, leaving a total of $3,147,540.21 to be raised by tax on real estate.

Admiral's Lobster Cost Aide's License

Newport, R. I., July 12—Rear Admiral J. R. P. Pringle, president of the naval war college, went hungry for lobsters, but furnished a juicy bit of gossip for navy circles when he ordered Coxswain Leonard M. Stockdale, who runs the admiral's private gig, out to get lobsters from the private navy pot.

Coxswain Stockdale hurried out in the gig to obey the orders, taking with him two sailors, H. F. Brown and G. F. Brown, who had no license to fish for lobsters, and immediately began to haul in shellfish for the admiral. Then two deputies of the State shellfish commission came up and curiously examined the catch. In it they found several short lobsters all ready to be taken to the admiral.

Stockdale and the Browns were summoned to court and on a plea of guilty Stockdale was fined $10 and his license to fish for the admiral was revoked. The two Browns pleaded not guilty and were released on the plea of a lieutenant sent from the war college.

The admiral will buy his lobsters at Newport stores in the future.

POOR YOUTH BATTLES SUIT TO TAKE HIS GUGGENHEIM BRIDE

PITS HIS LOVE AGAINST BIG MILLIONS

Copper Heir Plans Court Action to Annul Daughter's Runaway-Marriage

New York, July 12 (INS)—An heiress bride today was the prize for which the son of a Long Island railroad agent resolved to struggle. Thomas Gorman, real estate man of Port Washington, N. Y., decided today to fight back after learning that the wealthy Edward A. Guggenheime will sue for the annulment of the marriage of their 18-year-old daughter, Natalie.

Service of a notice in an action to be started in Westchester County left Gorman in no doubt of their intention. But he did not give up hope, even though his wife was whisked off to Europe right after the elopement.

There is a cute little home at Sands Point that Gorman has bought. Guggenheim, the son of Murray Guggenheim and member of the firm of Guggenheim Brothers of 120 Broadway, intends to keep his daughter out of it.

But Gorman is of a firmer metal than the ductile coppas in which the bride's family made a fabulous fortune. He is preparing to contest the action to retain the beautiful young heiress, who laughed at several scores of millions of dollars and social and religious barriers on April 6, when he and Natalie slipped away to be wed.

He was a frequent guest at the Guggenheim mansion at Roslyn. From it they sloped to Great Neck, where the Rev. Kirkland Huske performed the marriage in All Saints Protestant Episcopal church.

Opposition to the marriage by the parents is said to be on religious grounds as much as on social and financial inequalities. Gorman is a Catholic and the Guggenheims are Jewish.

The annulment is sought because Gorman is alleged to have deceived his bride as to the state of his finances.

CRASH BLOCKS 5 B. & M. TRAINS

Five trains on the Southern Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad were delayed nearly half an hour today when a sand-laden auto truck crashed through a concrete gate-mechanism housing at the Main st. crossing in Winchester and stuck there.

The truck, loaded with seven tons of sand, was moving a few feet off the right-hand edge of the macadam road and when the hind wheel came on top of the concrete which protects the crossing gate mechanism, the concrete gave way and dropped the truck wheel into the hole.

For nearly half an hour the driver, railroad section hands and volunteers labored to jack up the truck and move it off the crossing, where it was blocking both tracks.

Three outbound trains to Nashua, Manchester and Concord, N. H., and two inbound, one from New Hampshire and one from Woburn, were held up meanwhile.

11 DIE WHILE CROWDS LAUGH

Gillingham, Eng., July 12 (AP)—While laughing thousands watched what they thought part of a fire-fighting show, 11 boy naval cadets and firemen were burned to death here.

Six are seriously injured and were taken to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, in aid of which the fete had been held.

A specially erected model house, designed to be the scene of a gala, fire brigade rescue spectacle, became instead the horrifying death trap for the boys, all 12 to 14 years old, who had so eagerly taken part in the festival.

The youngsters, dressed in clown suits, made frenzied efforts to escape the flames, bringing only great applause from the crowd below, all unknowing that the realistic action had suddenly assumed tragic reality.

Fireman Jack Tabrett, who had been the blushing veiled bride in a previous mock ceremony, was standing at the top of the flimsy structure when flames suddenly burst at the bottom. The crowd cheered and laughed, glad that the spectacle had begun, but Tabrett knew that something was wrong, for flames should have started at the top and the building been cleared of the actors.

In five minutes the flames had destroyed the oil-soaked canvas and all that was left were the charred bodies of the youths and the gaunt skeleton of the model house.

Frantic mothers and fathers crowded the little mortuary seeking the bodies of their sons. One tall gray-haired man stumbled from the hospital where he had seen his 13-year-old boy die from burns.

"My little boy's clothes were all burned and still smouldering as he lay on the ground beside the blaze mass when I got here," said the grief-stricken man. "Only last night he was asked to take part in the mock-tragedy and was so happy that he went, even though I asked him not to."

The bodies were so charred that they were difficult to identify. Only five of the 11 dead had been identified today including a man motor driver who had taken part in the festival. Ronald Mitchell, previously reported dead was later reported still alive, although critically injured.

Naples, Italy, July 12 (AP)—Mysterious thefts of money from the mails from America which have been going on for three years are believed solved by the arrest today of the director of the sub-post office here, Cavaliere (Sir) Michael De Lima.

Leaving the postoffice with a valice containing about a hundred letters, each enclosing small sums of money from immigrants in America to their families here, De Lima was pounced upon by postal inspectors.

Police found several opened letters and a gold pen and gold pencil resembling one which senders in America claimed had been lost in the mails. The police said De Lima had been living in great luxury in a villa.

Postal inspectors are trying to estimate how much of the thefts can be attributed to De Lima, since the losses have been spread over three years and are alleged to total many thousands of dollars.

The movie colony appeared serene and studios carried on production as usual. The rumor presumably was given strength by the suspension of five members of Equity by Gilmore.

POINCARE SAYS MELLON WAS OBDURATE

Paris, July 12 (INS)—A renewed attempt to induce the French Chamber of Deputies to ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement between the United States and France by August 1, was launched by Premier Raymond Poincare in the Chamber today.

M. Poincare told the house he had made efforts to obtain modification of the terms laid down in the agreement, but had failed.

"When Secretary Mellon came to France last year," he said, "I did my best to talk with him to obtain better conditions. But he absolutely refused to discuss the situation.

TWO COURSES OPEN.

"You have two courses open. One is to pay $400,000,000 in cash on the first of August in liquidation of a debt contracted with America for war materials. The other is to ratify the Mellon-Berenger agreement and pay this sum over a period of 62 years."

Under the terms of the agreement, this debt would automatically be funded into the other French debts to France.

"If we repudiate the Mellon-Berenger agreement and refuse to pay by August 1, America has the right to throw our treasury bonds into the international market," Poincare said.

FACES HARD BLOW.

"Four hundred million dollars at the present time will be a cruel blow to the treasury, and even if we must pay this lump sum, remember that American and British war debts still remain."

It was reported that President Doumergue may solve the entire problem by one swift stroke. It is understood he contemplates signing a presidential decree ratifying the debt agreements with the United States and Great Britain, and that Foreign Minister Briand and Finance Minister Cheron will immediately affix their signatures.

AIM AT SAVING RURAL GIRLS IN LONDON

London, July 12 (AP)—Some girls from the rural districts in England still think the streets of the metropolis are paved with gold, but the Central Council for the Social Welfare for Girls is trying to save them from disillusionment.

"Our aim," said Sir Oscar Warburg, chairman of the council, at the annual meeting here, "is to prevent the risk that young girls take in coming up to London from the country. They may fall into bad ways merely through ignorance of alternatives.

"I believe the younger generation are still anxious to lead healthy lives and it would be an appalling waste if we did not do all we could to bring them into touch with those facilities for healthy recreation provided by the numerous societies in London."

The Rev. Austin Thompson, vice-chairman, said: "I do not wish it to be thought that we are tempting girls to London by promises of good positions. We are strongly tempted to put up notices saying: 'Don't come to London—but, if you must, then let us help you.' The belief is still held that London is paved with gold.

"The council often receives strange requests of help from country girls. One wrote asking the council to find her employment in London as a dairymaid or herdswoman. I believe she thought they still kept cows in St. James' Park."

Mrs. Wilfred Rowlands, of the Welsh Girls' Friendly Aid Society, said young Welsh girls often came to London in answer to tempting advertisements which appeared in Welsh papers.

The ceremony was arranged in accordance with British naval custom as soon as the admiralty had announced its decision to abandon all attempts to salvage the sunken submarine.

A short memorial service was conducted, wreaths were cast into the sea and the big guns of the battleship and her auxiliaries paid a last salute to the gallant dead.

The Rodney flew the flag of Admiral H. E. Grace, commander of submarines at Portsmouth naval station.

The admiralty informed Admiral Grace that in view of the certainty that all the missing men perished immediately when the vessel sank and of the difficulties in salvaging a vessel which lay so deep, further salvage attempts would be abandoned.

WORK ON BIG CATHEDRAL TO START SOON

Washington, July 12—The beginning of a $3,000,000 building program in the development of the imposing Washington Cathedral site of the tomb of Woodrow Wilson and the mecca for tens of thousands of pilgrims each year, has been announced by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington.

The first step in the new development plan was the action of the cathedral chapter in authorizing a contract involving $250,000 for the purchase of the first 50,000 cubic feet of stone required to begin the building of the north and south transepts of the cathedral.

Bishop Freeman, in making the announcement, said it is hoped the new construction program will be completed by 1932 in time for a religious commemoration of the 200th anniversary of Georgge Washington's birth.

The portions of the cathedral edifice included in the new construction program form the fifth great unit of the cathedral structure. Other units now structurally completed are the foundations, the crypt chapels, the apse and the choir. It is estimated that 250,000 cubic feet of stone will be used in the new work. The cost, including sufficient endowment for maintenance and operation, is expected to exceed $3,000,000, Bishop Freeman said.

Funds for the initial order of stone were raised in a special effort conducted by the executive committee of the cathedral, of which former United States Senator Pepper is chairman. The additional amounts needed for the purchase of the remainder of the stone and for actual construction are being sought in a more general program under the leadership of Gen. Pershing.

KANE'S...14 Stores Now...and Growing...KANE'S

This is NOT the time to sell Parlor Suites!

We have found that the month of July in past years has been our poorest month for selling Parlor Suites. People just don't seem to buy Parlor Suites in July. Nevertheless, because our 14 stores contract to take a certain number of Parlor Suites regardless of conditions—we MUST sell Parlor Suites in July—our Parlor Suite stock MUST be kept moving—we cannot allow any sizable amount of Parlor Suites to accumulate.

What is the best way to sell Parlor Suites in July?—and we think that the answer is to sell them very cheaply—but SO cheaply that we can be assured that our normal volume of Parlor Suite business will be maintained. And that's exactly what we've done here.

We've taken suites that ordinarily would sell for many dollars more—and marked them at such low prices—that we KNOW will take care of moving a large quantity.

New England's Largest Furniture Institution!

No interest or Carrying Charges!

Open Saturday Evening Till 9!

We Promise You This!

These suites—now priced at $45 for three pieces were not made to sell for $150 or $200—but they ARE worth $100!—It is only because we MUST move 200 suites very soon that we make this offer. This is an actual example where merchandise MUST be sold regardless of costs or profits!

Just Figure It Out!

Just say to yourself, "A 3-Piece Parlor Suite for $45!"—and figure for yourself that when you are able to buy a Sofa, Club Chair and Wing Chair—upholstered in Velour for $45—nicely made—that it's as big a bargain as you have ever seen anywhere regardless of what it may be!

CURTISS ISSUES CATALOGUE OF AIR TOURS

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

Although the average person is slow in accepting aviation as a means of fast, safe transportation, indications are that the day is near when the man on the street will think of an airplane when he wants to go somewhere. With this idea in mind, Curtiss Flying Service has published a three-leaf folder describing all the services offered by the company, and the various ships in operation. Sears, in charge of the Boston station, says that the new folders will be sent out and that anybody with half an idea that they want to fly somewhere will consult the booklet in the same light that they now look at a railroad time-table. Copies of the booklet can be obtained at the Boston office of Curtiss or at the Boston Airport.

Joe Barber went to Marston's Mills in a Challenger Robin, with two passengers. Barber landed at Skyways' field down there, and returned to his home station in a little less than an hour. Lowell Bayles took a Whirlwind motored Travel Air down to Hartford with two passengers, making the round trip in less than two hours. A Warner engined Command-Aire was delivered, and all the Curtiss pilots took a crack at flying it. Every one of the boys put his stamp of approval on the ship. It is a three place, open cockpit job, and the motor, delivering 100-horsepower, is air-cooled. Ralph T. Wickford, chief pilot for Curtiss in Boston, took the tri-motored Ford off on scheduled time, with five passengers and the usual amount of newspapers. Seven more passengers were to be picked up at Martha's Vineyard, and flown to Nantucket. Paul Herman went up to Rockland, Me., in an Ireland amphibian, for delivery to Bill Wincipaw, chief pilot of the marine division of the Curtiss company at Rockland. Herman flew up from Jamestown, R. I. in the Ireland, and crossed 40 miles of land, getting himself 6000 feet altitude for the hop. Bayles and McGrevrey went up to Springfield, and brought back a Challenger engined Fledgling, which will be used for the solo-in-one-day stunt today, described in another column of this paper.

We have been appointed managing director of the All-New England air meet, to be held on Martha's Vineyard Airport, August 2 and 4. Bob Foote, traffic manager of the Curtiss company, has decided that a real rip-roaring air meet should be run down on the island, and plans are being made for one of the hottest flying affairs ever seen in the New England States.

All the New England commercial operators will be invited, and the two days will be crammed full of flying. We are working on the list of events for the meet and will have it ready in a few days.

Carl Jackson of Beverly, owner of the OX-5 American Eagle, which was badly Moth bitten in the cyclonic wind some weeks ago, is having the ship set up again after a complete overhauling by Granville Bros. Air Service. Jackson avows that he will keep the Eagle away from all Moths in the future.

Carl also states that he will frame the first $5 bill he makes in commercial aviation in his home town, and when he gets so broke that he has to take the five-spot off the wall he will quit flying.

To the uninitiated the operation of airplanes seems to be very easy, but if one were to go into the shop of the Curtiss company and look the place over, one would find a fairly complicated system for keeping the airplanes flying. B. F. Riley is chief of maintenance for the company, and is assisted by Douglas Husted, in charge of the motor room; Parker McGrevey, inspector of all repair jobs and ships ready for the line; O. C. Leonard, line chief, and Ray Greene, purchasing agent. With the limited quarters now at hand Riley is accomplishing the same kind of wonders that H. E. Wallis did when he was in charge of the maintenance, and when the new hangar is finished things will be on an even higher plane than they are now. Under the new rules, when the hangars are completed, airplanes that are ready to fly will be on the line, and all other ships will be in the shop, out of sight of the flying public.

Maj. R. F. Raymond of the Air Sales, Inc., flew in a new Avro Avian from the factory in Bridgeport, Ct. This is the second ship owned by the company, and will be kept in storage for immediate sale.

Fred Pereira and his chief pilot, Bob Grey, of the Bay State Flying Service, hopped down to Fall River for a little business with the American Eagle dealers down there.

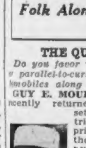
Folk Along Automobile Row Answer Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

Do you favor "angular" parking or parallel-to-curb parking for automobiles along Automobile Row?



GUY E. MOULTON, Concord—I recently returned to Massachusetts from a long trip and was surprised to learn that the old parking rules had been changed along this busy automobile centre. It is hard enough to find any place to park an auto in Boston, and I think the diagonal way of parking along here is much better than the new way of standing machines close to the curbing.

JAMES FIELD, South End—The angular parking is better in this section where so many automobiles are in constant use. As for myself, I have been in the automobile business for the past 15 years. The two-wheel-to-the-curb parking takes up too much space. There two cars can be parked at an angle, under the old rule, there is not space enough now to park much more than one-half a car.

MRS. JOHN W. COONEY, Allston—I am in favor of parking automobiles alongside the curbing, rather than in a diagonal position. There is less chance for an accident happening when driving out from the sidewalk when your machine is started away than when you have to take chances on running into another car approaching while you back out diagonally. There is also more danger of the angular-parked machines being struck by passing machines.

MISS IRENE E. WARE, South Boston—It seems to me that the angular parking of automobiles in this motor mart would be better for business than the parallel parking which is now being enforced. It is so much easier to drive away from a place when the machine stands at an angle than when the car has to be moved forward and back a great many times if it is close to the curbing and in a straight line with it.

Robs Tech Home Then Goes to Bed With Rum

Mrs. Annie C. Norris, wife of Prof. James F. Norris of Technology, returned home to a ransacked apartment at 405 Marlboro st., today, after being absent a week. She telephoned the police.

Special Officers Dodge and Blood and Patrolman Dooley searched the apartment and found a bedroom door locked.

"Who is it?" cried a voice, when they knocked.

"The police," they answered. "Open up."

"Nothing doing," was the response.

They broke down the door and discovered Joseph Broderick, 27, of Gray st., South End, in bed. What's more he had gone to sleep.

Beside the bed were assembled many articles of loot. Near him were two empty bottles that had contained pre-war whiskey the Norrises were saving for medicinal purposes.

Clubhouse Movement Gains Among Women

Women's clubhouses are not like men's clubhouses. They are not places largely for personal accommodation. They are almost without exception, community centers.

These are the views of Mrs. W. T. Bost, executive secretary of the North Carolina Federation Headquarters, expressed to explain the reason for the tremendous increase in the number of houses acquired by clubwomen and the great impetus in the clubhouse movement itself.

The story of the clubhouse movement in North Carolina is not unlike that of other states, she says. It is the natural result of the discarding of foolish notions about women and their homes.

"Just as soon as folks got away from the idea that the owning of a woman's club did not necessarily mean luring the women away from their own hearthstones at all hours of the day and particularly at those hours when the family is fed and the babies put to bed, the clubhouse movement was accepted," Mrs. Bost explained.

"It took a long time to convince them that women's clubhouses are not like men's clubhouses, places for personal accommodations."

North Carolina clubs are rapidly approaching the three-quarters of a million dollar mark in the investment of club property, the secretary says.

"Methods of financing clubhouses in North Carolina," Mrs. Bost continues, "have ranged all the way from cake, candy and apron sales, bazaars and home talent performances, rentals from club apartments and rentals from halls, to the most modern and approved ways of raising money. It has been said, and truthfully so, that women's clubs and the buildings that house them are monuments to women's thrift, for with tiny dues as a rule, club after club has had the courage to undertake the financing of a clubhouse and the patience and determination to see it through."

And with such hope for the future and with consideration of their intrinsic worth to the betterment of mankind, have the two and half million federated clubwomen of the country created their lodgings that their own ideas and thoughts and sentiments may find expression within friendly walls and echo into the hearts of friendly listeners.

No movement of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has been so growing and powerful as the club movement, for in name, town and city the cry of a clubhouse has been eternal.

Even in the smaller communities, the small town, the women's clubs have their clubhouse and in that building of potential fine friendships and lasting information, the women of the country have cemented their minds, refined their bodies, gaining the firm belief that they are of limitless value to the nation.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

The New Hampshire League will hold its annual school of citizenship next Wednesday and Thursday at the New Hampshire University at Durham. A regional conference including all the New England states will open the meeting in the morning, at which living costs chairmen from each state will demonstrate the "group study" method.

Mrs. Eva G. Osgood of Melrose will represent Massachusetts in this group. Mrs. Louis G. Hunter, field secretary, and Mrs. True Worthy White, secretary of political education of the Massachusetts League, expect to attend the conference, and several local leagues are arranging delegations.

The first day of the school will be devoted to the study of the power situation with speeches by Ernest Gruening, editor of Portland News; Lewis Goldberg of the Public Utilities Commission of Boston; Walter E. Lyman, president of the New England Service Company, and John Bauer of New York.

The subjects of Taxation and Town and City Government will be treated by John W. Pearson on the following day. Mr. Pearson is a resident of Concord. He is a member of the recent Interim Tax Commission. Other speakers on this subject include John Foster of Concord, a State Forester, and John F. Sly of the department of government at Harvard University.

Narcotic Peddlers Hit by Druggists

Providence, July 12—Prohibition and narcotics were discussed by Eugene V. Brokmeyer of Washington, general attorney for the National Association of Retail Druggists, at the second day of the annual convention of the Rhode Island Pharmaceutical Association and Traveling Men's Auxiliary at the Hotel De La Place, Narragansett Pier.

Brokmeyer declared that unlicensed traffickers were responsible for more than 99 per cent of the abuse of liquor and narcotic drugs and insisted that the registered druggists and doctors were entitled to much more consideration from the government and the people.

9 Burned to Death During Fire Drill

London, July 12—Nine boys were burned to death when a dummy house collapsed during a fire brigade display at Gillingham Park, Kent. The boys were in a building where they represented the occupants to be rescued by firemen from an imaginary fire. It is not known how the place caught fire, but spectators saw it suddenly blaze and fell in flames on the boys.

WOMAN ADMITS $14,000 THEFT 'FOR LOVE'

Topeka, Kan., July 12 (AP)—A comely young brunette, mother of a seven-year-old daughter, and two others were in jail today following her alleged confession that she committed the $14,000 daylight holdup of the employes of the Security Benefit Association here June 25.

The woman, Mrs. Vivian Scraper, 25, and Cecil Streit, 24, employe of the association, were arrested in an apartment Marie Rainey, 17, who lived with them as their "niece," and was Mrs. Scraper's only confidante after the crime, was held for investigation.

Officers found $13,000 hidden in an overstuffed chair and behind a picture in the couple's apartment.

Mrs. Scraper told Sheriff Wayne Horning, he said, that it was because of her love for Streit that she committed the holdup after forcing A. G. Perlich, Kansas City salesman, to drive her to the scene of the robbery in front of the Security Benefit Association building. Streit is a brother of Louis Streit, one of the association's employes, whom she robbed.

Sheriff Horning said Mrs. Scraper had refused to implicate Streit or anyone else in her confession.

City Quickly Flooded by Big Cloudburst

El Paso, Tex., July 12 (AP)—This city today surveyed wreckage and ruin in the wake of one of the most disastrous cloudbursts in its history. It hit an exclusive residential district and damage was estimated at $250,000.

Without warning, a solid blanket of water was released from clouds over the Franklin mountains on the edge of town. A wall of water swept into the streets, carrying boulders as large as office desks.

The stone foundation of one house was swept from under the building. Parked automobiles were picked up by the current and smashed into poles and buildings. Chunks of asphalt pavement were torn up and carried away.

Abode homes of Mexicans in the hoylands were washed away by the water which stood three feet deep until late last night.

Southern Pacific trains were delayed, but service today was normal and clearing away of debris was under way.

SANDINO ABOUT, WELL ARMED

Merida Yucatan, July 12 (AP)—Augustino Sandino, exiled Nicaraguan insurgent leader, and his entourage arrived here to take up temporary residence. All, well armed and wearing khaki campaign uniforms, established themselves at the Gran Hotel.

Socrates Sandino, brother of the leader, alone was dressed in civilian clothes and did not carry a pistol.

Tie Up Your Dog or Call for Your Mail

Washington, July 12 (INS)—"Either muzzle up or tie up your dog or call at the postoffice for your mail hereafter."

That is the dictum issued by W. M. Mooney, Washington postmaster, to a large number of residents of the suburban areas of the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia, and they will have to choose at once between daily mail service and the freedom of their dogs.

Mooney issued the order on account of an increasing number of cases brought to his attention of letter carriers who have been bitten by dogs in the last few weeks while on duty. Some of the wounds suffered by carriers have required treatment, Mooney said.

In some instances the deliveries have already been stopped after mail men were injured and other withdrawals of service will follow on a large scale unless the postal officials are given the co-operation of patrons.

WIND CAUSES BURNING OF 2

Monument Beach, July 12 (AP)—When a gust of wind blew a few drops of gasoline against the hot exhaust of a tractor in use on the Baker estate here, a flash of flame burned two workmen.

Charles Holden of Falmouth was seriously burned. Manuel Gardner, his helper in construction of a tennis court, escaped with slight burns.

Wins $1 in $20,000 Heart Balm Suit

Greenfield, July 12—Frederick J. Donahue of Millers Falls was awarded $1 damages by a jury in the superior court before which evidence in the $20,000 suit for alienation of his wife's affections had been heard for the past two days. The defendant named in the suit was Jose C. Deane, also of Millers Falls.

According to the testimony given during the trial Mrs. Catherine Donahue of Brookline, wife of the plaintiff, and the defendant took trips together to Springfield Vt. and other places.

SOLO FLYING IN DAY AIM OF NOVICE

Taking off into the early morning sun today, Lowell R. Bayles, pilot for the Curtiss Flying Service, started to teach L. N. Seaman of 7 Rockand ave., Roxbury, how to fly in one day. This has never before been attempted in Boston or New England, and has been done only twice before in the country.

Seaman, who has been up in the air only twice before in his life, was selected by Bayles for the experiment for his determination to learn to fly and to learn in the quickest possible way.

The average time for a student soloing is six hours, which will bring the time of the solo act to about 2 o'clock this afternoon. The whole affair depends on the weather's being good enough for the entire day, according to Bayles.

"With all the refueling endurance flights going on in other parts of the country," said Bayles, "I can see no reason why Boston shouldn't get a little attention from the rest of the world. I plan to have Seaman on landings after an hour or a litt'e more of air work. Then will come the terrific grind of landings and takeoffs, and I am sure that young Seaman will be flying all by himself before this day is over."

Wales' Yankee Friend Divorced

Paris, July 12 (AP)—A divorce was granted today to Mrs. Vera Arkwright Bate from Frederick Blantford Bate, who was secretary general of the recent conference of experts on reparations. They were married in Paris, May 1, 1918, Mrs. Bate being originally from Illinois. Bate is now secretary of the American section of the reparations commission. He is prominent socially and is known as a close friend of the Prince of Wales with whom he plays golf when the prince comes to Paris.

VOTING LISTS TO BE TRIMMED

Worcester, July 12—The names of 6000 voters, not returned by the assessors in their canvass of the city in April, may be dropped from the voting lists. Unless the necessary information is given the registrars of voters before July 20 the lists will be slashed. This is the largest number in the history of the city and is the result of the record registration for the presidential election last year.

Hearing at Auburn on Power Project

Augusta, Me., July 12—The Public Utilities Commission ordered a hearing at the courthouse, in Auburn, on July 19, on the petition of Frank W. Winter of Auburn, and others for the organization of a corporation to deal in electric energy. The petition asks that the company be given the right to purchase electric energy from the Androscoggin Electric Co. to serve Auburn, Durham, New Gloucester, Lewiston, Lisbon, Webster, Greene, Turner, Minot, Mechanic Falls and Poland.

R. I. Solon Fined as Reckless Driver

Providence, July 12—Representative Frederick R. Hazard, Republican, of Narragansett, was fined $100 and costs by Judge Walsh in superior court for reckless driving after a complaint of drunken driving had been reduced to the lesser offense on recommendation of Asst. Atty. Gen. Sigmund W. Fischer, Jr.

Representative Ira Marcus, Republican House floor leader, was counsel for Hazard, who was arrested on Cranston st. when a police officer saw him hanging out of a parked automobile. He had appealed a $150 fine imposed in eighth district court for drunken driving.

Five More Lottery Defendants Give Up

Five additional defendants to a federal indictment based on operation of the Imperial lottery pool surrendered at the Federal building here and entered not guilty pleas when arraigned before Judge James A. Lowell in the federal court. Each of them furnished $500 bail pending trial.

Those who surrendered are George A. McGeachey of Worcester, Harry Reid and Andrew J. Brady of Ludlow, Raymond F. Kemp and Charles O. Blakeslee of Westfield.

Seven other defendants surrendered Wednesday and 10 others are yet to be arraigned.

Excavate for New Deerfoot Building

Southboro, July 12—Excavation has started for the addition of a new office building to the Deerfoot Dairy plant. The added floor space is made necessary because of the decision to move all Deerfoot activities, including that of the New York and Boston offices, to the Southboro plant.

It was stated by officials of the company that the decision to enlarge the present building has nothing to do with the recent merger of the Deerfoot Farm holdings with that of the National Dairy Products Company.

Unidentified Man's Body Found at Sea

The bathing suit clad body of an unidentified man of middle age was picked up at sea about 10 miles off Boston Light by members of the crew of the yacht Selma, owned by George N. Jeffson of Worcester. No marks of violence were found on the body and police opinion is that the man was drowned while bathing. The man was described as about 54 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height and weighing 125 pounds. He was of dark complexion and bald headed. His bathing suit was light red.

"Youth Units"

Here's one good reason for eating Fro-joy

TO watch faces radiate delight when Fro-joy ends a "potluck" meal seems reason enough for serving it often. It's a great satisfaction to know that a woman can give so much pleasure to her dear ones so easily.

EASTMAN AT 75 GIVES AWAY 75 MILLION

Rochester, N. Y., July 12 (AP)—The 75th anniversary today of the birth of George Eastman, multi-millionaire, industrialist and philanthropist, found the inventor of the kodak and colored motion pictures for amateurs going through his regular routine, despite his declaration five years ago that he was to adopt a new program, in which leisure was to play a large part.

"I don't care for any fussing on my birthday," he said. "I will not alter my daily routine in any way."

This year also marked the 15th anniversary of Mr. Eastman's first invention and the 14th anniversary of the motion picture. In 1889 Thomas A. Edison invented the kinetoscope, the operation of which was made possible by the Eastman transparent, flexible film.

The man whose philanthropies reached the $75,000,000 mark this year is notably close-mouthed regarding his own activities. Many of his largest gifts, particularly one of $19,000,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, were made anonymously, the identity of the donor leaking out afterwards.

Pinned Under Overturned Motor

Miss Stella Segal, 35, of 32 Harley st., Roxbury, is in a serious condition in the City Hospital today as the result of injuries received when she was buried from an automobile in which she was riding as the machine collided with another car at Neponset ave., Parkman and Adams sts., Dorchester.

The auto in which Miss Segal was riding was being driven by her brother, Louis Segal. As he attempted to swing his car into Parkman st. from Neponset ave., Segal's car was struck by a light coach, operated by Clement Panara, of Myrtle pl., Dorchester, who was approaching Parkman st. on Adams st.

Miss Segal was pinned beneath the auto when it overturned.

Attleboro Man Held in Bad Check Case

Attleboro, July 12—Joseph Lebritton, 28, former local resident, is being held in $2000 for the Bristol county grand jury today by Judge Ralph C. Estes, on charges of larceny from the office of Dr. Joshua W. Clark, and forgery of a check given Harry L. Capron in 1925.

He was taken to New Bedford jail, lacking bail. Lebritton was released Tuesday from state prison at Concord, N. H., after serving 23 months of a four-year sentence for forgery of checks in Portsmouth.

PERCY CROSBY IS BUSY these days creating the royalties from his best seller edition of Skippy—but he finds time to put the delightful youngsters through more capers for the Sunday Advertiser each week. Those who regret Skippy the other six days should not miss him on Sundays.

Adventure Ends

Mrs. Etta Drew of Norton, mother of two, was held for desertion because she donned man's clothing and went out to seek adventure.

Attleboro, July 12—Mrs. Etta Drew, 18, arrested in Stoughton, charged with abandoning her two children, girls, 18 and 5 months old, respectively, pleaded not guilty in court to the charge brought against her by Chief Benjamin B. Scanlon of Norton. She was held in $1000 for further hearing July 18.

Spectators in court were amazed when the defendant, clad in a man's blue trousers and soft collar shirt and with her hair cut like a man rose to plead. Nearly everyone but police believed she was a youth used to hard work in open air.

She was taken to New Bedford jail being unable to get bail.

NOWELL FACES CHARGES OF FRAUD

Amos Nowell of Brookline and Marblehead, grandson of the late Governor Ames; Anna L. Nowell, Frank Heath, Charles A. Crane and B. H. Brann, the American Trust Company and the State Street Trust Company are named as defendants in an equity bill filed in the federal court here by the Eureka Smelting Company of Nevada.

Nowell formerly was a director and secretary of the company which now sues. The bill notes that he continued in both offices until other directors "forced" his resignation in the fall of 1928.

The bill charges that late in 1928 Nowell, Brann, Crane and Heath conspired to interfere with and block the transaction of business by the petitioner, and by influence, coercion, fraud and other wrongful means to carry into effect a scheme to hinder and hamper the company.

It is further charged that the four defendants schemed to deprive the petitioner of its property, goods, assets, profits, income and effects and to divert its income into other channels for their own selfish gain and profit, and to secure control of the company and its assets at a grossly inadequate price."

MORE MEMBERS DEMANDED BY C. D. A. HEAD

Atlantic City, July 12—Miss Kate Mahoney of Troy, N. Y., supreme president of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association, served notice on that body in annual session on the steel pier that she would not be a candidate for re-election at the end of the present term unless there was a marked increase in membership.

"Financially we have gone ahead by leaps and bounds," Miss Mahoney said, "but we have stood still in membership. There should be a corresponding increase between the two."

Following her ultimatum, representatives from different parts of the United States and Canada pledged support in obtaining more members. Miss Mahoney was re-elected for four years. She has held that office 19 years.

Mrs. Mary C. Connelly of Syracuse, N. Y., was re-elected supreme vice-president and Miss Frances E. McGee of Scranton, Pa., second vice-president.

One hundred and fifty members of the New England delegation were the guests of the Pittsburg delegation at the Morton Hotel. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, chaplain general of the Boston diocese, gave a word of greeting.

The New England delegation enjoyed a roller chair parade on the boardwalk.

"That's real coffee"

"Yes, Our head-waiter told me about it the other night"

. . . He said, "Most of the finest hotels and restaurants that are famous for their delicious coffee serve La Touraine."

THE exquisitely balanced blending of LA TOURAINE, its "bouquet" and sparkling flavor, have made it the first choice of the coffee tasters . . . the men who buy coffee for hotels and restaurants, to whom the selection of coffee is a fine art.

"Serve only LA TOURAINE and use plenty of it" are their orders to their chefs. The great majority of the finest hotels and restaurants in the country follow that same simple recipe for making the delicious coffee they serve.

May we make the same suggestion to you? Your grocer has LA TOURAINE COFFEE, tightly sealed in pound and half pound tins, that will bring you all the flavor and fragrance of fine coffee at its best . . . "Real Coffee!" your husband will call it.

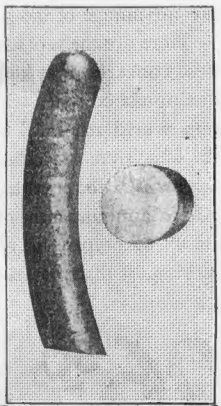
All Frankforts are not . . .

"Brothers Under The Skin"

. . . test the Difference yourself



THE old adage that "Beauty is Only Skin Deep" may apply to human beings, but not to Frankforts. While the outside of any good Frankfort must be attractive, it is the meat inside which determines the quality. The superior flavor of Arlington Frankforts is due to fine quality meats and choice spices. You will notice how clear and smooth the meat is in Arlington. You will delight in the flavor—pleasing, but not too highly seasoned.

Serve Frankforts oftener in your home—and insist on Arlington. As the main course of the meal, served with Baked Beans or other vegetables, they provide a meal of alluring tastiness and high food value. Of course, Arlington Frankforts are prepared under U.S. Government Inspection, as are all products of John P. Squire & Company.

WOMEN RALLY TO DRIVE FOR TAX CUT

The business and professional women of the country are rallying to the support of the Boston Evening American petition for reduction in the rate of federal taxation on earned incomes.

One of the major items of business before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, now holding its 10th annual convention at Mackinac Island, Mich., is the matter of supporting the country-wide campaign for federal income tax reductions being conducted by Hearst newspapers, according to word received here today.

Miss Martha Connole, an attorney of East St. Louis, Ill., and legislative chairman of the organization, announced that she will recommend to the convention that definite action be taken. More than 2000 delegates, representing 50,000 business and professional women are gathered at the Mackinac Island conference.

MANY DELEGATES PLEDGED

Many local chapters have passed resolutions and affixed their signatures to the Boston American petitions to Congress while holding conventions.

Speaking to the delegates at Mackinac Island, Miss Connole said:

"It is unfair to tax the earned incomes on the same basis as that derived from interest on investments or inherited income.

"We have 55,000 leading business and professional women in our organization. We are becoming a power. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Ruth Bryan Owen, Congresswomen, are members of our organization and we have their assurances that they will work for legislation which we endorse.

"Most large incomes are not earned. They are either inherited or are the result of manipulation on the stock exchange. The person who is working for an income either by his hands or his brains is using up his energy and vitality."

Miss Connole announced she would also ask the convention to endorse the continuance of the Federation's own project, its taxation exemption bill which seeks an increase in exemption for single persons under the Federal income tax law.

AUTHORS SOUND HIGH PRAISE OF WAR BOOK

"All Quiet on the Western Front," Erich Maria Remarque's war story, which will begin in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser and be continued daily in the Boston Evening American, is a "perfectly magnificent picture of the war as it really was, and ought to be read by everyone," is the opinion of Maj. A. Hamilton Gibbs, brother of Sir Philip Gibbs, noted war correspondent.

Maj. Gibbs, who is himself an author of war books, and who served four and a half years with the British forces, is well qualified to pass judgment on the truth of Remarque's portraits of a soldier's life.

"The author of 'All Quiet on the Western Front' has given us a magnificent picture of the reactions of an intellectual who finds himself flung into the trenches to kill the 'enemy' for the sake of God and country. Remarque does not attempt to depict the emotions of the 'averasge' soldier, but rather those of an intellectual who is trying to readjust values, mental, physical and spiritual.

"I think he correctly expresses the attitude of private soldiers of his type in every army. I wish that all parents would read this book, and learn what their sons will have to suffer in the event of another war."

Russell Gordon Carter of Newton, another author, who was cited for bravery in France, declares that Remarque's book is an absolutely true picture of human nature brutalized by war.

"The story told so simply, so graphically," he says, "is from beginning to end an argument against war. It tells the truth about war; it tells the truth about human nature in time of war; and those of us who saw active fighting in France know that it is the truth."

Start reading this gripping story which begins in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and continue reading it every day in the Boston Evening American.

Here's a Chance for You to Get in on a Big Shake

Middleton, Ct., July 12—Prof Wilbur G. Foye, head of the geology department at Wesleyan University, has been commissioned by the National Research Council to gather data regarding earthquakes in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Dr. Foye requests the cooperation of the public in this work and asks that any person in these States who feels an earthquake to report the phenomenon to him as official representative of the National Research Council and the Seismological Society of America.

The committee is gathering the data with the hope in mind that it may sometime be able to prophesy the place and time of earthquake.

RADIO NOTES -:- TONIGHT'S PROGRAMS -:- PERSONALITIES ON THE AIR

LISTENING IN

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE MOST DIFFICULT problem before the sponsors of radio programs and station officials is the ever-recurring one of program selection. Do radio listeners desire high-brow entertainment or low brow diversion? The finicky will say that there are many grades and shades of entertainment, ranging from the rigid and exacting classicism of chamber music to the most maniacal of modernistic jazz. But by and large, the field divides itself like the wets and the dries, into two unyielding camps. The one would abolish all dance music, all low comedy, all wisecracking, all commercial appeal, all bad grammar and unrefined diction. The other would approve a Constitutional amendment forbidding grand opera, symphony concerts, literary and scientific lectures, dramatic art movements and all offerings claiming an ethical appeal to intelligences above Grade C

SPEAKING on behalf of no less than 1-100 000 000th per cent of the total population of the United States, I can see some reason for the existence of nearly every type of program now current, with the exception of banquet broadcasts. At one time it was thought that the Eighteenth Amendment had spelled the doom of that sturdy American institution. But radio has supplied the role of stimulant, and the banquet is once more in our midst, more sprightly than ever. One peculiarity of the banquets is that they're not satisfied with merely the dulcinism of the banqueteers but they now needs spread themselves abroad in the land, breeding with the fertility of the Japanese beetle.

SERIOUSLY, however, if radio program makers want to know what kind of entertainment their listeners prefer, they should study their people gather. A case in point is the semi-symphony series now going on at the Charles River Esplanade at the foot of Mt. Vernon st, here in Boston. It is fascinating to study the makeup of the vast audience which gathers nightly to listen to the players under Arthur Fiedler . . . random snatches of Beethoven, Verdi, Tschaikowski, Schubert, Wagner, Lehar and Victor Herbert. . . . You will find as many elegantly clad Back Bay and Brookline lads and lasses as you will ecstatic Italian and Slavs from the North and West Ends. Staid elderly folks of the solid business type are seated their, absorbed in the strains which the water-born breezes bring from the band stand. Music students and stenographers, clerks and shop-men, matinee girls, little misses doll or stroll on the grass or pay their dime for an evening's comfort in a folding chair.

WITHOUT a doubt, music very similar to the evening's outdoor program is available by radio for a great part of this audience. It is possible that this radio amusement could be enjoyed from the deep luxury of soft arm chairs, and without the distractions of casual traffic noises and the piping of little children. But it is the idea which brings them there. Irradiation is an idea which radio program makers must get across if they are to capture their audiences and hold them against competing attractions. One thing is certain. That is that the public will take the trouble to seek out what it wants. It will gladly pay for what it wants. It will endure any amount of inconvenience for the sake of what it wants. The story of that entertainment is brought into the home free of charge and in unending streams, does not appear to [illegible] exploited.

The proof is that people still do shut off the radio and go out into the park or to the movies or to a favorite [illegible] joint.

HURRICANES TO ORDER AT WBZ

Sound Mimicry Given Special Study by John L. Clark, Program Director

The introduction of new musico-dramatic productions by John L. Clark, program director, has opened up a field of research which is unlike anything hitherto imagined in radio broadcasting. Sound mimicry is its name and it is being exhaustively investigated.

Clark has accumulated a library of sounds, descriptive of everything from the purring of a cat to the deafening blast of a steam siren. A special room or laboratory has been fitted up where all this material is kept. It has been goodnaturedly labelled the "ordnance department" by the staff, because here is stored all of the station's heavy artillery.

The strange and grotesque assortment provides potential waterfalls, galloping horses, locomotives, fire engines, police whistles, ships bells pistol shots, bell buoys, bomb explosions, crashing trees, thunder, wind, rain, and ocean of your radio entertainments.

A terrific storm with thunder, lightning and their attending havoc of trees crashing and tons of water loosed earthward can be made astoundingly real to the radio audience sitting quietly at home on a mid-summer's evening. A battle high above the clouds, in which two or more aeroplanes are engaged, involves a variety of sound effects — none of which is made by a Wright Whirlwind motor or a Browning machine gun.

Radio "properties" have been more or less known since radio came along some eight years ago But there have been few men in the business who had time to devote to specialization in prope alone. Henry Pisk Carlton, whose "Great Moments in History" are justly famous wherever New York stations are heard, was one of the pioneers to take up the study of sound props and to have been others in the past but their efforts were cursory and make-shift because of the exigencies of the job to be done.

There are perhaps 500 different sounds distinguishable on the radio. Many of these are undiscovered, but new ones are tried out every day. The ingenuity of listeners in the United States doubtless seldom gives thought to the manner in which these sound effects are produced in the programs faling upon their ears each night. But if the radio property man has done his work well and is practiced in his art, they do not. The illusion is all that matters.

Radio-Victor Dealers Banquet Tonight

The Radio-Victor Corporation, in conjunction with its distributors in the Boston territory, is holding a large dealers' meeting and banquet at the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston this evening.

A. R. Beyer, eastern district sales manager, and E. C. Carlson, in charge of sales promotion, will address the dealers, who are expected to number up to 1000, on R. C. A.'s sales plans for the 1929-30 radio season.

The Wetmore-Savage Company and the General Electric Supply Company in Boston, and the Union Electrical Supply Company of Providence, R. I., will also be represented.

RIVER CONCERT ON WNAC WAVE TONIGHT

Presentation of the Charles River Embankment concert by Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Symphony men over WNAC tonight paves the way for a national broadcast of this public spirited enterprise.

Tonight's concert will be the first to be broadcast in the series which had its inauguration on the evening of July 5. Officials of the local station indicate that an attempt will be made not only to broadcast the entire remainder of the series, but to put them on the national Columbia network.

The portion of the program which will be heard by radio listeners will be the first half, from 8 to 9 o'clock. The concerts ordinarily cover a period of two hours with a brief intermission at 9 o'clock. Music is largely of the type heard in the annual Pops season at Symphony Hall

Large audiences have attended all the concerts to date, and each evening sees an increase in numbers. The accommodations are ample for a large crowd, 5000 chairs are available. Within the past day or two, steps have been taken to erect a radio booth which, together with the huge sounding board behind the players, should greatly improve the acoustics

Joseph Lopez will function as announcer of tonight's musical numbers

CROWD SEIZES GUNMAN IN CHELSEA

Jacob (Dutch) Turranski, 34, of 30 Elm st., Chelsea, was arrested after he was alleged to have attempted to shoot a man and his wife and was chased by more than 1000 people on Everett ave., Chelsea.

Mr. Charles Fratis of 12 Woodrow ave., Malden, told the police that Turranski pointed a gun at herself and her husband and pulled the trigger twice, though it failed to explode. She said his third attempt was successful and the bullet grazed the sleeve of a bystander.

Patrolman John J. Follis found Turranski surrounded by hundreds of people at the corner of Chestnut st. and Everett ave., and placed him under arrest on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

The Malden woman told the police that several days ago Turranski made some remarks about herself and her sister which she resented. She said that she told her husband about the matter and he accompanied her to Chelsea with the intention of making Turranski apologize.

She stated that they found him at the corner of Cherry st. and Everett ave., and a heated argument took place. A large throng of people gathered around them and, she asserted, the crowd was thrown into a panic when Turranski pulled a revolver out of his pocket and pointed it at her husband.

She said he pulled the trigger twice, but it merely clicked. The third time he pressed it, she said a shot rang out and the bullet grazed a man in the crowd.

Turranski started to run, with the crowd after him. The numbers increased and by the time he reached the corner of Chestnut st., a block away, he was entirely surrounded. Patrolman Follis pushed his way through the mob and placed Turranski under arrest. He quickly frisked him, but found no weapon. It is believed he threw the gun away or passed it to a man in the crowd.

The police were conducting a search in the vicinity in an effort to find the man who was grazed by the bullet. Turranski will be arraigned in court this morning.

LOST NERVE IN SUICIDE PLAN

Portland, Me., July 12—Lucy O. Chute, 15-year-old Gorham schoolgirl and state ward, who disappeared after leaving a note that she intended to kill herself, is starting life anew today on a farm near here.

Found yesterday at Kezar Falls after a two day search, Lucy told authorities she fully intended to take the poison she had secured, but lost her nerve and "just stayed away." She told them she had made her plan because she had been threatened with a term in the reformatory at Skowhegan by a previous employer.

Mrs. Maude Hamilton, director of the Child Welfare Society of Saco, placed the girl on a farm and the society will pay $3 a week for her board.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN COTTON REPORT

Statistical reports of production, sales and shipments of standard cotton clothing during the first six months of 1929, and also for the month of June, were made public today by the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York. The figures for June cover a period of four weeks.

During the first six months of 1929 29 plants were in operation, it was announced. This was equivalent to 95.2 per cent of production which was 1,844,849,000 yards, or 13.8 per cent the same six months period were 1,750,315 towards, or 93.5 per cent of production.

Shipments during June (4 weeks) were 212,994,000 yards, which was equivalent to 84.1 per cent of production on which was 285,928,000 yards. Sales during the month were 235,140,000 yards, or 79.3 per cent of production.

Stocks on hand at the end of June amounted to 401,260,000 yards, or the close of 92 per cent during the month. Unfilled orders on June 30 amounted to 308,748,000 yards, a decrease of 62 per cent since the beginning of the month.

Stocks on hand as of June 30th are slightly in excess of unfilled orders. It is a favorable situation, but the current ratio of stocks to orders is unusually favorable when compared with figures for previous years. On June 27th, 1925, orders exceeded orders by 0.6 weeks' production at the current rate. A year ago this ratio was 2.2 weeks and in 1927 it was 2.8 weeks. On June 30, 1927, unfilled orders exceeded stocks by 3 weeks' production due to the abnormally large sales which were concentrated in the first half of the year because of prevailing low prices for cotton and cloths. Prices are not available prior to 1928.

The figures for the first six months of 1929 show a decided improvement over the same period in 1928, the ratio of shipments to production being 93.5 per cent compared with 93.5 per cent in 1928. The ratio of sales to production during these six months was 84.5 per cent in 1929 compared with 80.6 per cent in 1928.

These statistics on the manufacture and sale of standard cotton cloths are compiled daily and supplied by 23 groups of manufacturers and selling agents reporting through the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York, and the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc. The reports cover upwards of 300 classifications or constructions of cotton cloths in general use, a large part of the production of these fabrics in the United States.

An Answer to the Pessimistic View of U.S. Shipping Future

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 12—When the ordinary American business man or economist discusses na.ive shipping activities and prospects, he develops an inferiority complex. To combat this defeatist philosophy, the National Industrial Conference Board, in a new book on the American Merchant Marine, undertakes to stress some of the potential natural and economic advantages which may be the basis for a renaissance of American shipping prosperity.

At this period of peak American business prosperity, shipping is one of the outstanding laggard industries, which has failed to fall in line. Yet the Conference Board, in reviewing the situation sounds this hopeful keynote. "While these natural and economic advantages have not in recent years been sufficient to overcome the adverse factors in the situation, they are of sufficient importance in the future. This applies particularly to the advantage of location, the presence of American industrialists, in the organization and management of private business enterprises.

"There is no reason to expect that foreign countries and the American genius for organization will prove less energetic in the field of ship building. Given adequate incentive and genius arrives, than in other industrial fields. However, during the next few years whose natural and economic advantages have not been sufficient to maintain them against the competition of marine notwithstanding various governmental measures which have been adopted from time to time with a view to stimulating private effort."

In the inventory of American shipping assets, the Board lists long seacoasts, on the Atlantic and the Pacific as well as the Gulf of Mexico, and numerous excellent harbors, extensive supplies of coal and oil, ample surplus capital, managerial skill, and an extensive foreign trade.

Of course, in spite of these theoretical advantages, shipping activities in the United States in the last few years have been far from successful. The new book conceded: "In taking stock of the present situation with respect to the American trade, the fact that stands out most clearly is that the world's domestic exchange of American shipping has over its foreign competitors lies in the possession of a very considerable amount of oil-burning tonnage, the advantage which is at all times contingent upon the relationship between the cost of oil and the price of coal With respect to age and speed, the American merchant fleet is not on a par with the fleets of other countries. There are relatively few old vessels in the American marine, but there are still fewer of recent construction. A large proportion of American ships are low speed vessels, principally those built during the war."

"Moreover, the large number of motorships—a type of vessel in which this country is particularly deficient—which have been added to the merchant fleets of foreign countries in recent years is conducive to the belief that the inferiority of the American merchant marine. The larger part of the American tonnage engaged in foreign trade will soon need to be replaced with faster and more modern ships in order to make this merchant fleet an effective instrumentality of national defense, or an efficient agency for the development and protection of foreign trade. Steps to remedy this defect in direction have already been taken as a result of the enactment of the Merchant Marine Act of 1928."

A National Industrial Conference Board, in its recent publications, indicates that governmental subsidies should be given, not on the theory of a permanent basis but along the lines of promoting national defense, or to make complete withdrawal of the Shipping Board from competition with private shipping interests, echoing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States slogan calling for less government in business.

The Board feels that the government had provided in the Merchant Marine Act of 1928, a sound, and is already having a stimulating effect on shipbuilding. The industry, however, is still perplexed by problems of reorganization, both financial and operating, with the necessity of meeting world competition on the sea, despite higher costs prevailing here, resulting in part from a higher scale of wages.

The forthcoming maiden voyage of the fast steamer Bremen of the North German Lloyd gives us the new competition in speed in this race, American ships are woefully backward. Only one express trans-Atlantic steamer flies under the Stars and Stripes. New ships are likely to be constructed with the speed factor in mind

ORIGIN OF SHOE SIZE MEASURES IS UNKNOWN

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

It will strike many people as strange that the origin of shoe size measures at present is unknown. Several attempts have been made to explain how they originated, but none has been generally accepted. Harvey A. Sweetser, New England district manager of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is on the trail of this interesting information regarding shoe sizes, so it may come day be forthcoming.

The present system is cryptic in itself to most people. There is a popular belief it was adopted to convince some members of the fair sex that they were getting a smaller sized shoe than was really being sold them. This belief is probably quite poorly based. In connection with this mention of shoes, it can be stated that most leaders of the New England shoe industry are very optimistic regarding the outlook for the rest of the current year.

Comparatively few people today are aware that vast fortunes have elapsed since gasoline was considered a waste product. Utilization of wealth once wasted has created many modern fortunes. From the scrap heaps of Calumet & Hecla, the big Boston copper, hundreds of thousands of dollars are today being realized. Furnace slag, once considered a nuisance, is now being utilized to the final ounce, piling up profits of the big steels. Modern inventive genius is responsible for turning a good deal of the old waste into Midas dollars for us.

Here is what President Gage P. Wright of the Business Economic Digest thinks of the sales situation in this section: "Among the New England states, Connecticut is one of the most favorable and, consequently, should contribute somewhat to overall sales volume. However, the best sales prospects are in the machinery industries centers. Purchasing power for shoe localities should be only about equal to that of last year, it is believed. Eastern Massachusetts and New Hampshire offer relatively the least favorable sales opportunities of the New England group as a whole.

In the current issue of Barron's Financial Weekly, the Trader inquires that though the change in the stock market is not surprising, the two fundamental influences that govern its trend, viz., money and earnings, cannot be altogether ignored by those whose concern is for the long pull rather than for short-term commitments." The sensational activity of business at a high level may make for a reverse instead of a mild business readjustment, and "investors in the industrial leaders of the Middle West are making their plans for greater business in the final quarter of the year."

It is not unlikely the Barron's stock market expert believes, that the make or will come to the public and that the ferment now working in the highest grade issues will spread to the rank and file of the outstanding common, constituting working control. Possible tax difficulty in the final invoice in figuring profits of Senator Couzens on Ford stock is looked for. There may be some difficulty in deciding basis on which profits accruing to Mr. Wiley from sale of stock, which he got at 25 par value, will be figured. The fact that the deal was consummated in Canada may add further complications.

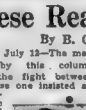
Is Prosperity Lop-Sided? These Readers Say It Is

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, July 12—The mail received by this column often recalls the fight between two men because one insisted an apple was rotten and the other insisted it was not. After the fight was over they discovered that one side was rotten and the other was not. They had looked at it from different angles.



B. C. Forbes

Much is said and written these days about our unparalleled prosperity. Yet many violently deny the existence of general prosperity.

So much space is devoted to presenting the bright side of the picture that it may well be given a few glimpses of the other side of the picture.

A 70-year-old Pennsylvanian writes: "I am one of the thousands in times of the cleaning house process in the Allegheny Valley. Henry Ford started it and the rest of the manufacturers followed suit. I was an office employe for almost 10 years, when last July the manager gave me notice. He told me my service had always been entirely satisfactory, but they had to economize.

"I pleaded with them to give me at least part time at anything on account of my $2000 insurance and weekly benefits in case of sickness or death. I also called their attention to my limited means and my very helpless dependents and the utter impossibility for me to secure employment elsewhere on account of my age. All in vain.

"I am 70 years of age. My wife has been in the hospital for seven years, incurable. I being unable to pay, she is now a charity patient. It is needless to say I am also facing poverty."

Another reader writes: "Rural life is just about passing out. Country schools, churches, stores and farms are just about done for. The small man in the city is in just as bad shape. The small factories are simply hanging on. The country Manger and many of the city garages are waiting for the sheriff to call.

"I am not a federal government does not take matters in hand and see that there is work enough for all who care to work, and at wages that will allow the laborer to become married and raise a family, not necessarily in luxury, but at least in decency, then it will not be long until that government begins to figure at the stake.

"The trouble with the big men is that they have become blinded by the bright glare of big profits and big dividends through mergers, squeezing employes and customers alike, until it is impossible for them to see the handwriting on the wall, which is plainly visible to the rest of us."

From another reader comes this:

"During the past several years much has been said about America's prosperity. Ex-President Coolidge had a lot to say on the subject.

"I am wondering if America really is enjoying a period of prosperity, or is it a delusion? It has been said, both before Congress and the Senate, that there are approximately 5,000,000 men in the United States who are out of employment. This condition has been existing for several years. The question is, how long will it continue, and what is the solution? Let the proclaimer of prosperity check up on the merchants in the smaller and millions of men who are trying to scratch out a living for their family. In the coal mines and steel mills many thousands of men have been laid off. This is also true of the railroad industry. We find in every branch of industry that wages are falling and modern machinery have made tremendous inroads on labor. In many cases the purchasing power is with about half the man power formerly employed.

"I most heartily approve of all these modern developments, but I believe they have brought us to a place where we are face to face with one of the greatest problems since the Civil War. I am frankly puzzled to find how country can be properous and keep her people poor. I believe that the world owes to every man who is willing to work, a living. I believe that idleness is the root of much of the present-day lawlessness, and that we have reached a place in our national existence where the whole social order is due for a change.

"This may mean a six-hour day and a five-day week. It may mean a five-hour day and a six-day week. Any thing is better than a depression in order to absorb our surplus man power and keep every person busy. It is the duty and responsibility that our nation and our legislators should begin to face.

"I am not a Socialist—I am 100 per cent Republican—but believe in national responsibility for our own people."

MARINE ENGINE MAKING HAS BIG BOOM

When an old and well known New Hampshire company recently announced it would in the future devote itself largely to the motor boat field, its action called forth nationwide comment.

Principally these resolved themselves into statements that overwhelming orders were coming to motorists into the marine field, which may or may not be true. The assured fact is that the demand for water craft has been tremendously increased during the past few months. This has been reflected in enlarged production and earnings of boat builders and marine engine manufacturers. Net income of the Kermath Manufacturing Co., for example, is expected to reach $190,000 in the first half of this year, more than in any full year of the company's history.

The company reported earnings of $66,000 in the initial four months of 1926, equal to 95 cents a share on the 90,000 shares outstanding, almost enough to cover a full year's dividend requirement.

Business in May and June indicated profits of at least $105,000, it was stated.

The company, organized 20 years ago with a paid-in capital of $20,000, was at first sustained in large part of the stock held by the management was released to the public. Directors started dividends at the rate of $1 a share annually with a payment of 25 cents July 1. Products of the company include 15 types of marine engines in a range covering requirements of about five per cent of the power boats under 75 feet. Around 60 per cent of the output is used in pleasure craft of all descriptions, while 40 per cent is used for commercial purposes. They are distributed by 2000 dealers and builder agents.

A steady increase in business has been shown for 12 years, net earnings having risen from $133,524, or $1.48 a share, in 1926, to $191,704, or $1.98 a share, in 1927, and to $180,823, or $2.01 a share, in 1928.

With the exception of $250,000 advanced by stockholders in 1918, the company has grown from the original $20,000 in its present size with the help of no outside capital. Total assets at the end of 1928 reached $847,000.

Current assets amounted to $465,-710, and current liabilities were shown as $97,806, a ratio of almost 5 to 1. Surplus was $449,479. Property, plant and equipment were valued at $165,000.

WAR ACE LEADS AS AIRCRAFT SALESMAN

Fort Worth, Texas, July 12—W. T. Piper, famous war ace and Texas and Oklahoma distributor for the Ryan brougham, is believed to hold the record as America's best airplane salesman.

Ponder has personally sold Ryans retailing at $92,750 in the last three months. Most of these planes have been sold to Texas and Oklahoma business men and corporations who demand fast and luxurious transportation. Oil companies, attorneys, engineers, construction companies, editors, commercial airplane dealers and other professions are represented among his customers. None of these planes have been sold in quantities, so that his record is even more remarkable than that of other distributors, who have augmented this mark through quantity sales to one customer.

"More airplanes are being operated in Texas and Oklahoma for private business use than in any other state, with the possible exception of California," Ponder said. "Business men and large corporations are finding that the airplane is becoming a valuable asset for executives, salesmen and engineers who must make many long distance trips. It is also being used for surveys of power companies and oil lines, and for the transportation of parts and supplies needed in a hurry in the oil fields in this section.

Many of these planes have been sold as a result of the remarkable endurance record of 172 hours set by Reg" Robbins and "Jim" Kelly in their Ryan monoplane, the Fort Worth. Ponder had charge of the servicing and refueling arrangements for this flight.

MILK OUTPUT HOLDS UP

By (AP)

Milk production in New England on July 1 was about average, the New England Crop Reporting Service reported today. Production per cow for all cows in reported by dairymen on that date was the same as that reported on June 1, but 1.3 per cent below that of last year and 2 per cent above the five year average.

As compared with a year ago, numbers of all milk cows in New England farms were reported 1.4 per cent higher increases in Maine of 2 per cent, Vermont 4 per cent, Rhode 1 and 2 per cent and Connecticut 1 per cent were partly offset by decreases in New Hampshire of 4.5 per cent and Massachusetts 2 per cent.

The average production per cow for New England as a whole on July 1, was 18.37 pounds, compared with 18.58 pounds on June 1 The proportion of dry cows to all cows in New England was reported from 17.8 per cent to 16.2 per cent during June.

Fertilizer Prices Display a Decline

There was a further decline in prices of fertilizer materials during June, according to Fertilizer Economics, published by the Berger Crops Publishing Corp., New York City. At 116 the index is 13 points or 10 per cent lower than in July, 1928. The decline has been due to lower prices for both organic and mineral ammonites.

In June the index number of the price of 32 fertilizer materials declined one point to 116 the lowest since December, 1927.

During the seven-year period 1922-1928, fertilizer tag sales in July and August decreased at the rate of 6.8 per cent and 5.7 per cent a year, respectively.

Godchaux Sugar Has Its Biggest Month

Net profits after expenses, taxes and depreciation totaled $3,464 and June profit is conservatively estimated at over $100,000. Five months' sales were 212,605,000 pounds, against 183,019,960 pounds in the 1928 period.

NEW ENGLAND PLANTING OF POTATOES OFF

(By Associated Press)

The New England Crop Reporting Service reported today that low prices received by farmers for the 1928 potato crop had caused a general reduction in the potato acreage in New England this year.

A total of [illegible] is estimated for July 1, the report said, "compared with 246,000 acres harvested last year. Potato plantings in Maine were 4 per cent less than a year ago. The other New England states all made similar or greater cuts in their potato acreage.

"Conditions prevailing on July 1 forecast a production of 49,384,000 bushels of potatoes this year compared with 48,002,000 bushels harvested in 1928, Weather conditions to July 1 indicate that a better yield of potatoes may be expected in 1929 than was actually harvested in 1928. In Aroostook County, Maine, on July 1 was in good condition, having received sufficient amount of rain and showing every evidence of a good stand."

The service reported that other prospects for feed crops were generally favorable in New England. "Prospects now," the report said "are for a corn crop better than last year and average, wheat and oats larger than last year but less than average, while the hay crop will be smaller than last year. There was less than normal rain fall during June in all states except New Hampshire and Vermont, it being particularly dry in southern New England. This deficiency of moisture had an adverse effect on hay crops and on pastures back. Generally, however the crop situation is favorable for New England."

BENDIX GIFT AIDS RESEARCH

Vincent Bendix today announced a contribution of 500,000 kronen for a scientific archaeological research party to Dr. Sven Hedin, famous Swedish explorer, to head the Sino Swedish expedition into China. The King of Sweden previously had granted 500,000 kronen for the work. At the same time, Mr. Bendix announced a gift for Chicago of a completely reproduced Buddhist Temple which will be built from exact architectural drawings made in China and will be furnished with all the accessories, vestments, libraries, musical instruments and utensils that have actually been in use in these temples for many centuries.

Dr. Hedin is about to leave again from Stockholm, Sweden, for China, where he will supervise the erection of the temple to be erected in Chicago as a civic gift and another temple of the same character will be erected in Stockholm, Sweden. In addition to this, Dr. Hedin will bring out with him from the interior of these temples consisting of hundreds of paintings and figures in metal or wood as may conveniently be removed and photographs, plans and specifications for exact duplicates will be made by American and Swedish architects carefully that an exact replica of each temple building may be reproduced together with these things.

Mr. Bendix has requested Dr. Hedin to furnish a complete historical description and explanation of all the articles purchased, identifying each by its native name. It is expected that many other articles of ethnographical interest will be acquired for museum exhibits in both Stockholm and Chicago.

The expedition is expected to leave for Northern China and Mongolia within a few weeks and to be gone approximately two years, two years in ample time for the World's Fair and will be loaned to the Field Columbian Museum.

Dr. Hedin is a member of the Academy of Sciences and of the Swedish Government. He has just returned from an expedition in Sinkiang, China, backed by the Swedish government to seek evidences of lost cities and pottery, some of which date back to the Stone Age. Dr. Hedin's last journey also discovered many of the secrets of Thibet.

GOOD SHOWING FOR STREET RAILWAYS

According to reports received by the American Electric Railway Association from 244 electric railways representing approximately 60 per cent of the business in the United States [illegible] earnings [illegible] in June were able to make a fairly better showing in [illegible] than in May in spite of a falling off in gross revenue.

Gross revenue decreased approximately $7,000,000 and operating expenses also decreased $6,000,000, so that the net operating revenue was only $849,000 less than in 1927.

Increases in non-operating revenue and decreases in taxes paid, however, enabled these companies to show an increase in gross income, before dividends and charges, of over $600,000, the total being $97,264,268, as compared with $96,-664,268 for 1927.

Considering the unsettled industrial conditions during the early part of 1928, this increase in net return is encouraging.

Statistics show that there was a slight decrease in the number of passengers carried during the year, amounting to slightly over 1 per cent.

Bus operation by street railway companies, while not on a profitable basis, showed improvement and some slight increase in the number of passengers carried.

The operating ratio of this branch of the business however, remains high, the figure being approximately 86.37 per cent, as compared with 75 per cent for street railway operation alone.

EXPLAIN MAINE AUTO LAW

Augusta, Me., July 12—An interpreted by Insurance Commissioner Wilbur D. Spencer, the new motor vehicle operator's liability law, which will become effective after midnight tonight, means that either the driver of a car must have property or access to means sufficient to pay all judgments found against him for the offenses prescribed, or he must insure his liability before return is made to the registered insurance company in this state.

If he does not do this, his privilege of driving will be withheld and by law must be forfeited in case he is responsible for injury to others until he can earn the amount necessary to satisfy the judgment and costs. This means that in many instances operators will never recover their licenses.

MASTERPIECES GO ON BLOCK AT ART SALE

London, July 12 (INS)—The great art sale of this season opens today in the famous auction rooms of Christie's, and when all is over the sales are expected to realize hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Nearly every European school is represented. There are more than 100 paintings by Italian masters alone. The feature of the sale will be the auctioning of the two famous Holbein portraits of King Henry VIII and King Edward VI.

The appearance of a work by Holbein in the sale room is a rare event and these two historical portraits, which have been frequently exhibited and are well known to connoisseurs, have aroused the keenest competition among the collectors and their agents who have gathered here.

They belong to the Earl of Yarborough, a direct descendant of the great Tudor family. The portrait of King Henry VIII is three-quarter length and shows the king richly dressed and heavily jeweled. He wears a black velvet cap decorated with white feathers.

The portrait of Edward VI the boy king is half length and shows him with a sceptre in his hand.

There are five work by Titian, two by Tintoretto and others by Moroni, Giorgione and Gentile Tellini.

Cranes Entertain on Eve of Sailing for Europe —South Shore Garden Fetes Meet Success

JOLLY PRELIMINARIES MARK THE DEPARTURE OF MR. AND MRS. RICHARD T. CRANE, JR., and their debutante daughter, Miss Florence, who sail for Europe next week from New York. An English yacht has been chartered and when the Cranes reach foreign land they will gather round them their group of 20 friends and make ready for the 21-day cruise which will take them round the Grecian islands and along the Dalmatian coast. This to do until October and then to return to the North Shore and the palatial Castle Hill.

It is ever a happy round of revelry and partying at this Ipswich summer mansion which from its lofty heights overlooks the sand dunes. But on these days especially, before the excitement of leaving, countless guests come and go.

Twenty covers welcomed the Edwin Goulds of New York to the Crane household and to the North Shore before their take-off for the Bar Harbor colony.

AND TODAY CASTLE HILL is again alive with happy laughter. To spend a delightful week-end at the spacious place, to roam the gardens and study the deer who race their enclosure on the grounds, to bathe in the cooling waters of the northern Atlantic have come the Walter Jennings of New York, Mrs. Bayard Henry of Philadelphia and Mr. Charles Brown of Mt. Kisko, as house guests of the Cranes. A house-party will be arranged in their honor to which, no doubt, invitations will be sent out.

OBLIVIOUS TO ALL THE entertaining at Castle Hill is the young scion of the Cranes, now on a round-the-world trip. He will arrive in Vancouver late in September, his arrival at Castle Hill to coincide with the date of his family's home-coming.

MUSICALES WITHOUT PATRONAGE would somehow never sound as important as they should. However, this is not to be a failing of the three concerts, the first of which starts next Sunday, sponsored by the North Shore Arts Association, and to take place at the Association Galleries in East Gloucester, for names of the first water accompany the program to endorse the musicians and their selections. Col. A. Piatt Andrew, Mrs. George E. Fearing, the John Hays Hammonds, Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard, the J. S. [illegible] the Stephen W. Sleepers and the Henry A. Wise Woods undoubtedly will carry the three Sunday concerts to a glorious completion.

THE JUNIOR BON TONS OF Cohasset are an able lot. They swim, they ride, they sail, they motor and the girls can even make themselves quite useful when mother and mother's friends run flower shows and the like. A group of them were the cheerest waitresses flower show patrons ever had the good fortune to have serve them.

Mrs. Samuel Cabot holds one of the many fine pieces of needlework which she displayed at her Cohasset home in the first of three summer sales planned by the Educational Union. Mrs. John Richardson, Jr., and Miss Aimee Lamb assisted Mrs. Cabot in the sale.

Mabel Bell, whose active mother, Mrs. Stoughton Bell, supervised the bungalow tea room on the eighteen-and-a-half acre estate of Mrs. William H. Brown, headed the deb corps of waitresses, and their services swelled the returns for the Cohasset Garden Show.

LOVE'S LABORS WERE NOT lost when Mrs. Brown was awarded a first prize in the foreign exhibit. Her Sicilian donkey cart full of enticing fruits and vegetables was an eye-absorbing bit of horticulture. Mrs. James Dean, whose son Philip tended the cart, carried out the Sicilian idea even to the earrings of round gold and the red bandanna, and shared in the honors with Mrs. Brown. The fourth annual flower show, continuing through tomorrow, owes much of its success to Mrs. Brown. The huge barn, cleared of its shining motors for the occasion, filled to almost overflowing with floral profusion, gave forth an exotic perfume.

MARY McELWAIN, JEAN Adams, Arsene De Rosset, Marjorie Nuther, Katherine Johnson, Adelaide Brown served while pretty Louise MacMillan [illegible] from the outer portals of The Brown estate. With her five-cent charge the lovely Louise contributed a well-earned donation. The sub-deb daughter, Anne, of the Delano Wights, took tickets at the show entrance. Anne's arm was out of its sling and in perfect condition, I was glad to see.

HAPPY KIDDIES HOME FROM CAPITAL

With their trip to the national capital a thing of the past, the 12 assistants of the Boston American Lindbergh Club and their adult companions were home today, tired but happy.

They arrived at the Hotel Westminster after a fast trip from New York city. The trip was accomplished without incident. The party stopped at the Bond Hotel in Hartford for lunch and soon after were on the last leg of their six-day trip.

Too much credit cannot be given to the Marsters Company for the efficient and satisfactory manner in which every detail was looked after. George Darling, the driver, proved to be a most careful and capable chauffeur.

The Walton Hotel in Philadelphia, the Mt. Royal in Baltimore, the Driscoll in Washington and the Prince George in New York outdid themselves in the service rendered. The management of the Driscoll and Prince George Hotels were especially awake to the needs of the Boston party.

APRIL'S SOWING

by ROSEMARY REES

Six-Day Novel of Mystery, Love in the Far Off South Seas

Mary Brandon comes to New Zealand from England as a cook in a small hotel where Jim Carlyon has lived for five years in a state of continual drunkenness. Mary interests him; he sees she is a lady and is fascinated by her. She taunts him with his vice and his failure to go to the war and he seizes her and kisses her violently. Ashamed of himself he apologizes and is further shamed by her scorn. Sally Sargent and her daughter Joan, sheep owners, stall their car and are forced to spend the night in the inn where Mary works. They are fascinated by her and think they have seen her before. Mrs. Sargent invites her to her home. She also tries to persuade Jim to give up drinking and sends him some books. A young rancher, Lindsey Gerrard is attentive to Joan. Sally keeps trying to place Mary.

Mary takes riding lessons of Hennessey, a man of all work, and makes a friend of him. Doctor Stewart arrives and discovers he has met Mary in France casually. He also discloses the amazing information that he refused to pass Jim for war service. Mary finds herself trembling as she thinks how she taunted him.

She asks his forgiveness. Later he saves her life. Mary begins to distrust the Bayliss. Jim gives up drinking. Joan in love with Stewart, imagines he's lost his heart to Mary Brandon. He tells her he's taking Mary and Jim to the sports meeting. He thinks Joan is in love with Gerrard

Mary loses faith in Carlyon when an incident occurs that leads her to think he has been drinking again. She agrees to go to Dr Stewart as housekeeper and leaves the little hotel for good.

CHAPTER 5

Mrs. Brandon had been housekeeper at Doctor Stewart's little cottage for a month, and Beverley Hill thrilled with the excitement of it.

Mrs. Royden, lunching with daily and Joan one day, remarked briskly:

"And what's the latest news of Alick and your protegee?"

"I don't think there's anything fresh," said Sally. "She drives with him sometimes in his car, and I believe she keeps his cottage like a new pin. Alick has never been so well looked after, and I'm glad she's with him. In spite of all the talk, I can't see that it's anybody's business and I'm certain there's nothing but mutual respect and friendship between them."

Mrs. Royden nodded.

The conversation switched to Gerrard.

"Oh, that's a thing of the past," said Sally. Mrs Royden raised incredulary eyebrows.

"Yes, didn't you know?" put in Joan, thankful that the conversation seemed to be veering from that point of the compass where it

ORANGE CLUBS KEEP BOYNE DAY WITH PARADE

ORANGE LODGES CELEBRATE BOYNE DAY

Rival Organizations Parade Through Boston on the Way to Outings

The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, dear to the memory of loyal Orangemen, was celebrated today by rival lodges of Greater Boston and Massachusetts. This friendly rivalry resulted in the holding of two parades.

Uniformed knights, pipe and brass bands, together with flags and orange-colored sashes and decorations, combined to make a colorful spectacle as members of the order marched through downtown Boston en route to their respective outing points.

Each parade assembled and marched from Copley sq., that under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Inc., preceding the parade of the Grand Orange Lodge, Loyal Orange Institution of Massachusetts, by special arrangement with the Boston Board of Street Commissioners.

SEPARATE PARADES

The first to start was that of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, with Hugh Thompson as chief marshal. The route was from Copley sq. to the Museum of Fine Arts building, where the marchers boarded buses for Lake Pearl, Wrentham.

Deputy State Grand Master William McCartney, of the absence of State Grand Master William McCarthy, who is visiting his home in Belfast, Ire., and State Grand Secretary Albert J. Hall, led the division of local lodges and their auxiliaries.

Escorted by a detail of mounted police and headed by the Scottish pipe band of the Highland Dress Association, with Gladys Graham of West Concord as drum major, the parade started from Copley sq. promptly at 8:30, the route being along Huntington ave.

GIRL DRUM MAJOR.

One of the features was the baton-swinging exhibition of the pretty drum major, dressed in Highland costume and wearing a busby. Miss Graham has won more than 400 medals and prizes for her skill and today her costume was covered with many of the prize medals.

On arrival at Lake Pearl speeches commemorating the Battle of the Boyne were made by Deputy State Grand Master McCartney, the Rev. William Rutledge of East Boston, the Rev. Hector Ferguson and the Rev. John Gregg of Cambridge. The day's program included athletic events, boating, swimming and dancing.

SECOND PARADE STARTS.

The second parade got away shortly after 9 o'clock and was in charge of Chief Marshal Thomas Presley of Everett. Heading the marchers were State Grand Master Rev. William Snow of Winchendon and State Grand Secretary John A. McLeod of Everett.

The route was from Copley sq. along Boylston st., to Essex and thence to the South station, where a special train waited to convey the celebrants to Bryantville for an outing at Mayflower grove.

State Grand Mistress Mrs. Lillian Delmage of Everett headed the delegations of auxiliary lodges and the main body was preceded by the police mounted escort and a detachment of Knights of the Royal Black Preceptory.

Former State Senator William J. Donovan of Brighton, who represented the East Boston district when in the Legislature, was reported very much improved today at the East Boston Relief Hospital. He was taken there Wednesday suffering from stroke sustained while visiting friends in his old political bailiwick. His name is still on the danger list.

SEIZE RUM AT NANTASKET

Federal agents swooped down on a house under construction at Nantasket, and seized more than 1000 bottles of high class liquor which they value at some thousands of dollars. Quantities of champagne, high grade wines and beer and ale, as well as whiskey and gin were included in the seizure.

An arrest in connection with the raid is expected today, the officers said. The liquor was stored in the cellar of the house, which is practically completed, but is not yet occupied. The owner of the house, who gave his name as Fred Marchetti, told the federal agents that he knew nothing about the liquor and that he rented the cellar a week ago to a stranger.

FRENCH HERO TO BE FETED IN HUB

Gen. Gouraud, Who Lost Arm in War, Coming Here Next Tuesday

Gen. Henri J. E. Gouraud, military governor of Paris, and one of the outstanding military officials of France during the World War, will be feted by city and state officials during his visit to Boston next week.

The impetuous and brilliant French officer, who arrived in New York from France last Wednesday aboard the steamship Paris, will come directly to Boston next Tuesday following his visit to Baltimore where he will be special guest of the Rainbow Division veterans whom he commanded during the attack on Chalons in July, 1918, which marked the turning point of the war.

The one-armed hero of the Champagne had no superior as a fighter in the entire French army, according to many American officers who came in contact with him. He was regarded as second only to the great Foch as a strategist.

His round of receptions in Boston next week will begin with a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel Tuesday at 1 p. m. as guest of Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols. Fifty prominent Boston men and women will attend.

On Wednesday a luncheon will be served in his honor at the Copley-Plaza Hotel by Governor Frank G. Allen. It is understood that the dashing Frenchman will call upon Cardinal O'Connell on Thursday.

PLEAD ONE WAY RULE BAD FOR BUSINESS

Proposed Traffic Change is Termed "Ill Advised" by Merchants

The Retail Trade Board, through Daniel Bloomfield, its manager, has registered a strong protest with the Street Traffic Commission against making Tremont st. a one-way thoroughfare after present repairs are finished.

"We believe," says the letter to William A. Fisher, chairman of the Street Traffic Commission, "that the present plan to make Tremont st. a one-way street is an unnecessary and arbitrary interference with the business of the entire downtown section."

The text of the letter follows:

The governing council of the Retail Trade Board, at its last meeting, voted unanimously to enter a protest against the proposal to make Tremont st. a one-way street after repairs now being made are completed.

We believe that continuance of the present plan would be an unnecessary and arbitrary interference with business of the entire down-town section which represents a very substantial portion of the taxes received the city.

It would place a great burden of additional traffic on Washington st. and adjacent streets. It would add considerably to the inconvenience not only of motorists, truck and team operators but of pedestrians who have to use streets heavily clogged with motor traffic. It will, in our opinion, seriously interfere with the business of the city. There is also a question of how such a change would affect fire apparatus getting to points quickly.

The proposed plan is ill advised and we sincerely hope your commission will not allow it to prevail.

Wins $5 in New Bills With $1 Old Money

Who's Lucky Now? Why, Charles Farrell, 719 East Seventh st., South Boston, of course.

Farrell is the first person to cash in on the offer of the Boston Evening American to pay either $100 for $1 or $5 for $1 in an effort to help Uncle Sam hand out his new U. S. currency.

Just when Farrell began to believe that bad luck would follow him for some time to come, old Lady Luck crossed his path and Mr. Jinx was knocked into a cocked hat.

Farrell stopped at a newsstand in South Boston last evening and purchased a Boston Evening American. Then at a corner grocery he made a few purchases with an old $5 bill. He received two old $1 bills in change.

At the supper table last night Farrell read about the offer of the Boston Evening American to multiply the value of old dollar bills in new U. S. currency. He immediately gave his bankroll the "once-over."

And right in the middle of it bobbed out one of those old creased bills with the serial number of $A11836644D. He couldn't believe it. Yet it was a fact. N41183644D was one of the bills which the Boston Evening American offered to redeem in the new U. S. currency for $5.

Farrell was at this office today to collect.

"First luck I have had in a year," was all he said.

Farrell is the father of five small children. He is employed at the U. S. customs office, but has been out of work for nearly three months, owing to a severe attack of pneumonia. He has been home from the hospital only a couple weeks.

Luck does play peculiar jokes. Perhaps you will find one of these old dollar bills in your possession which will be redeemed by the Boston Evening American for $100 in the new U. S. bank notes.

Now cross A81836644D off the list and watch for additional numbers every day. Remember the Boston Evening American will print another list of lucky bills tomorrow.

All such bills must be presented at the Boston Evening American office, 5 Winthrop sq., room 203 within a week from the date of publication.

All such bills, however, must be presented at the Boston Evening American office, 5 Winthrop sq., room 203, within one week after publication of their numbers. No "dividends" will be paid on bills presented after the one-week time limit.

Those new bills which Uncle Sam is distributing are beauties. Just the size of one of the old cigar coupons. Here's a chance to get a handful of them and you can bet your hat you can get something bigger and better than a shaving mug or a pair of hose for a hundred of them.

Compare today's list of numbers of old $1 bills carefully with greenbacks you are carrying around. You don't have to buy the Boston Evening American to get the list of numbers, for the American is on file at the public library or you may look over the lists of numbers of lucky dollar bills at the Boston Evening American office. But whatever you do or wherever you go watch for one of those old lucky dollar bills.

Who Has the Lucky Bill? Two Are Worth $100 Each

YES, sir! The Boston Evening American will pay you $100 if you have one of the old $1 bills with the serial numbers of X22611698D or T74754802D.

Here's the serial numbers of twelve other Lucky Bucks which will be redeemed for $5 each if you have them:

Any person bringing in the old $1 bills listed above bearing the serial numbers will receive either $100 for $1 or $5 for $1.

If you haven't a Lucky dollar bill, some one of your friends may have it. Be sure to tell everyone you know of the Boston Evening American's offer. Do a good turn for your friends. It may mean many dollars—new ones—for them.

Watch for a new list of serial numbers tomorrow.

NEW HARVARD PENSION PLAN TO CARE FOR WIDOWS OF FACULTY

CONTRIBUTORY SYSTEM TO BE FOLLOWED

Optional Plan to Aid Professors Whose Carnegie Pensions Were Cut

Plans have been announced for the compensation of 162 professors of the Harvard faculty whose pensions from the Carnegie Foundation were reduced last spring.

The new plan is in line with the Harvard Corporation pension system already in operation. It contains in addition provisions for the widow of the professor at a rate equal to half the annuity paid him during his lifetime. The plan is optional and the date set for putting it into operation is September 1.

On May 1 the Carnegie Foundation announced a reduction in the amount of annuities to be paid in the future by the foundation. For those becoming 65 in 1932 and thereafter, a maximum of $1600 was allowed at the age of 70. Subsequently the trustees of the Carnegie Corporation of New York voted to increase by the amount of $500 the annuity to all pensionables who reach the age of 65 in 1931 or thereafter. This annuity was to be paid for the life of the annuitant only, but he might reserve a smaller amount during his life with provision for his widow should she survive him.

In view of this reduction, the Harvard Corporation voted the present plan in order to assure the officers of the university an annuity upon reaching the age of retirement, and to provide for their widows.

Under the new plan each faculty member shall pay each year a sum equal to 5 per cent of the salary voted him and when this is done the university shall place in the retiring fund to his credit a like sum. This means that a sum equal to 10 per cent of the professor's salary will be paid into the sinking fund for him each year. Another provision states that each annuity paid by Harvard under the plan will include any pension contributed for the recipient's benefit by the Carnegie Foundation, and in addition the amount standing to the annuitant's credit in the retiring fund will be used to aid in paying the annuity.

To each instructor participating in the plan the Harvard Corporation will pay after retirement during his lifetime an annuity equal to one-half his average salary for the five years prior to retirement. And if the officer dies after retirement leaving a widow the corporation will pay to his widow during her lifetime an annuity equal to one-half the amount of the annuity previously payable to the officer. With a few exceptions the maximum annuity under this plan to any officer of the university will be $4000, and the maximum annuity to any widow will be $2000.

STATE-WIDE DRIVE ON AUTO BRAKES PLANNED BY PARKER

NEW LAW GOES INTO EFFECT JULY 24

Poster Warning Motorists of Impending Tests Placed in Garages

The new legislative act which requires that there be periodic inspections of automobile equipment goes into effect on July 24, and Registrar of Motor Vehicles Capt. George A. Parker plans to conduct brake tests shortly after that date.

As a reminder, he has issued a poster, which will be distributed in a few days, and posted in garages and other places where they will be brought to the attention of the motorists. The poster reads:

Brakes—Will your car do this?

"Speed—Twenty miles an hour; Two-wheel brakes should stop your car in 40 feet; four-wheel brakes should stop your car in 25 feet.

"Speed—Thirty miles an hour; Two-wheel brakes should stop your car in 90 feet; four-wheel brakes should stop your car in 58 feet.

"Speed—Forty miles an hour; Two-wheel brakes should stop your car in 180 feet; four-wheel brakes should stop your car in 100 feet.

"Your brakes should be repaired or adjusted if they will not stop the car within the distances shown above," the poster further reads, and continues:

"Bad brakes are the cause of many automobile accidents.

"Brake tests will be an important feature of the periodic inspection which will be required by regulations made as required by Section 7-A, Chapter 90, General Laws. It is expected that these regulations will be made shortly after July 24 when the above act becomes effective.

"Remember—Safe driving requires good brakes."

AUTO RATING INSURANCE PLAN HIT

Installment Payments of Premiums Urged by New York Man

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 12—The eighth annual convention of the New England Association of Insurance Agents closed its three-day session at the Mt. Washington Hotel, having completed the most successful business and social program ever attempted at one of these conventions.

The closing session started off with a lively discussion of the newly adopted plan of merit rating for automobiles, led by Edwin J. Cole of Fall River, Mass. Ivan E. Lane of Waterville, Me., expressed the opinion that so far as the State of Maine was concerned, it amounted to practically nothing, and he believed that the insuring public was dissatisfied with the plan.

Ex-Insurance Commissioner Joseph Brown of Vermont favored the idea of penalizing the driver who is responsible for accidents Chester L. Newcomb of Providence held that the plan had not as yet been proved correct in practice, but he believed that, on the whole, the plan as worked out in his State had resulted in improved conditions as regards accidents. Ward S. Bates of Worcester, Mass., said that any scheme based on the rating of the moral hazard would result in encouraging perjury.

Albert Dodge, president of the New York State Association, addressed the convention on "State Association Service," explaining the plan used in New York State for providing for the payment of automobile insurance premiums. This plan, he said, had proved to be a most satisfactory method of handling this business. "Whether we like it or not," said President Dodge, "the instalment payment of premiums is now an accepted method of handling this business."

Secretary Walter H. Bennett of the National Association of Insurance Agents said that if the insurance men of this country did their duty by the public, nothing could stand against them. He made a plea for a more intelligent agency force in the insurance business for the better service of the public. Alexander H. Abbott of Norwich, Conn., concluded the program with an address on "The Outsider Looking In."

CHILD GIVES THIEF CHANCE TO ESCAPE

Police investigation into the robbery Wednesday at the home of Almarin Trowbridge, wealthy broker, of 734 Center st., Newton, has revealed that the escape of the housebreaker was effected because of the broker's concern for the safety of his five-year-old son.

When Mr. Trowbridge grabbed a carpenter's hammer to use as a weapon against the intruder, the boy ran to the kitchen, picked up his toy hammer, and followed his father to the attack.

According to Mr. Trowbridge's story to the police, he first heard the intruder in the chambers upstairs while in the dining room on the first floor. He had been making a box for his son, Almarin, Jr., and some tools were nearby. Reaching out, he armed himself with the hammer and started up to investigate.

He met the robber on the landing of the stairs, then grappled with him. In the middle of the scuffle, he noticed that the 5-year-old boy was mounting the stairs with the tiny hammer raised in his hand. He turned quickly to push his son to safety, and the burglar, seizing his opportunity, vaulted over the railing but not before the broker had struck him a glancing blow with his hammer.

Newton inspectors working on the case compiled a detailed list with descriptions of the articles stolen, which indicates that the total loot amounts to about $14,000.

The list of stolen articles as reported by the Trowbridges is one locket bracelet containing Junior's picture, one 2¼-karat diamond, seven chips on either side, $1035; one 1¾-karat diamond with onyx each side, $750; one platinum bar pin with four perfect diamonds, $300; one platinum bracelet with 10 ¼-karat diamonds set in black onyx, $400; one diamond and onyx bracelet with five diamonds, $350; one large onyx ring with letter "T." Mr. Trowbridge's mother's ring, $10,000; one cluster of diamonds, one large diamond in center and chips around it, $175; $300 in $5, $10, $20 bills; checks for $194, and a dozen other pieces of less expensive jewelry that bring the total over $14,000.

Pair Fined $100 Each for Cutting Dog's Tail

Performing a surgical operation on a dog's tail cost Antonio Sesuli and Louis Discenzi, both of Cottage st., East Boston, $100 each in the East Boston District Court. The men were assessed that amount by Judge Brown following a finding of guilty on a cruelty-to-animals charge.

Complainants in the case were agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. They testified that when the defendants believed amputation of Discenzi's dog's tail was necessary, the latter held the tail while Sesuli with a knife and hammer, cut it off.

POSTAL POST TO HAMILL

Frank B. Hamill, superintendent of the West Medford postoffice, has been appointed assistant superintendent of delivery at the main postoffice in Boston, the appointment being made on the recommendation of Postmaster Gow. The office carries a substantial increase in salary over the district superintendent's salary. Superintendent Hamill will be in charge of the city delivery and letter room and will work nights for a short time.

Mr. Hamill has been superintendent of the West Medford office since 1921. He began his postal career in Stoneham, being appointed there as a letter carrier in 1901. He was moved to Boston in 1918 as foreman of carriers and examiner. After spending three years here he went to Medford.

When he was first made superintendent, the West Medford office had only four carriers and three clerks. Through his efforts, he brought a new postoffice to the section, which now boasts of 16 carriers, six clerks and a laborer.

Mr. Hamill lives in Stoneham where for a number of years he was chairman of the town finance committee and has also held a number of other town offices. He is a member of the Medford Elks and Kiwanis Club and past grand knight of the Stoneham K. of C. For five years he was president of the Superintendents Club of the Boston postal district. Frank J. NEWBURYPORT SHOE FACTORY PICKETED

Newburyport, July 12—Agents of Haverhill shoe unions are making a drive against the Kent Shoe Company, a new firm, which for about two weeks has been doing business in a portion of the Dodge factory on Kent st. They picketed the building and accosted workers, a number of whom came from Haverhill, where there is labor trouble.

Police were called and a squad in charge of Asst. Sec. Marshal Hayes, hurried to the shop entrance. They stopped any interference with the employes. There was no disturbance.

Union organizers claim that they succeeded in stopping several workers from entering, and it is said that a picket squad will be on duty.

The claim is made that owners of the Kent Company formerly did business in Haverhill under the name of the Academy Company and that a strike was called in the Haverhill shop.

Herman W. Goldberg of the Kent Shoe Company declared that the firm is entirely distinct from the Academy Company, that it is proposed to run an open shop and that it is getting all the help it needed.

Bathing suits, bed clothing, rag mats and women's silk wearing apparel as well as men's clothing are included in the loot stolen by the thieves.

Oh Man!...

what would we do without our GAS WATER HEATER

WOULD you take a refreshing daily bath without the instant supply of hot water which gas provides? . . . you wouldn't!

Just imagine yourself going through the slow, tedious process of heating water in a teakettle or a washboiler and then carrying it to the tub—never having the time or the patience to heat enough for a real splash.

Yet that's the way it once was done—before gas came to the rescue. And that's why the entire family postponed the weekly bath chore until Saturday night. And it was a chore.

A bright new day dawned for bathers in 1885 when gas water heating was developed—a day which marked the beginning of an era of national cleanliness and better health.

Whenever you enjoy a bath—or any of the many conveniences of an abundant, ever-ready supply of hot water—give the credit to gas.

The most up-to-date types of Gas Water Heaters are now being demonstrated by your gas company. See them for what's new in water heating.

THE GAS INDUSTRY OF NEW ENGLAND
OF WHICH YOUR OWN GAS COMPANY IS A PART

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

"THE talk in regard to a Sharkey-Scott bout in London reminds me of a chat I once had with the late Tex Rickard," said Mr. Boston. "The great promoter was discussing heavyweight championship bouts.

"'I AM going to stage a title match in England some day,' declared Tex. 'I believe the contest will draw $1,000,000. There are thousands of American tourists in Europe during the summer, and others would go there if they thought they could take in a championship match

"'I know New Yorkers who wouldn't take a five-cent car ride to the Yankee Stadium to see a championship bout, but they would make an ocean trip for that purpose. People like to make trips and, a heavyweight fight is a perfect excuse for them.

"'I never like to put a big match in a spot which is accustomed to important ring battles. The fans in such places get blase. I have found that a new spot always gets behind a championship battle. [illegible]

"'Decent light town and that the mob would never pay a $25 top.' The gate receipts hit $1,500,000 which set a new record. We then took the same match to Chicago and drew $2,000,000.

"'Give me a half way decent British fighter and get the outstanding American and I'll put on a show in England which will make the world sit up.

"'I told Tex that if he went through with such a program that they might make him a count or an earl.

"'I'll be satisfied if the fans give me support at the box office,' replied Tex

"RICKARD also had hopes of some day staging a title bout in the Hub," went on Mr. Boston. "He felt that Boston was one of the best sport towns in the country and that it was ready for big things.

"'I first realized what a fine sport city Boston is when I staged the Sharkey-Maloney bout in New York,' said Tex. 'I sold $75,000 worth of tickets right in Boston. I picked up another $25,000 throughout New England. The gate receipts hit $232,000, but a big part of the money came from Boston and New England.'

"WHEN Rickard agreed to pay Sharkey $100,000 to fight young Stribling at Miami Beach, Fla., he was ridiculed It was said at the time that the match could not even hope to draw Sharkey's guarantee.

"'Rickard didn't live to see the bout go through, but the affair drew $405,000. Ten thousand persons were unable to get into the arena. If there had been more seats, the gate would have hit $600,000.

"THE talk in regard to a Sharkey-Scott bout in London and a Sharkey-Schmeling match in Boston is along trails blazed by Rickard. Tex often compared a big promotion to a circus.

"'Everybody wants to see a circus when it first hits town,' he would say. 'But one must pull up stakes after a week or so and strike a new town if you want to keep on making money.'

"PEOPLE like to go places and see things. A boxing bout offers a splendid excuse. At Miami Beach 90 per cent of the crowd was from the North. The excuse for the trip to Florida was the fight, but most of those who took in the show were also eager to escape the cold of the North and bask in the sun.

"'CANADA would prove an excellent spot for the Sharkey-Schmeling bout, as a great many people from the U. S. often consider a vacation there when trying to get rid of that 'out-of-door' [illegible]

FIRSTS ONLY COUNT IN BIG STADIUM MEET

By JOHN GILLOOLY

UPWARDS of 10,000 track enthusiasts are expected to gather in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon when Harvard and Yale unite to battle with the combined strength of Oxford and Cambridge in the ninth bbiennial track war between the teams.

Sport strife between Uncle Sam and John Bull always proves interesting and should swell the throng which will witness the meet. There is no distinct favorite. [illegible] lanes at 3 o'clock and from then on the meet will be anybody's. H-Y is in the pink of condition. The OC outfit is still a bit groggy Rather timid yet. It may be stated that Harvard and Yale will win this "rubber" track and field meet with their English brethren.

There will be 12 events in all Every race will be a final as each team is entered in only one event. First places only count in the score. But, if each team should win six firsts, and that doesn't seem out of the question, the seconds will be counted.

Outstanding favorites to win are Charley Engle, Yale, in the 220; R. Leigh-Wood of Oxford in the quarter-mile; C. E. R. Green, Cambridge, in the mile Jimmy Reid of Harvard in the two miles; Sid Kesselhorst of Yale in the low hurdles; Fred Sturdy of Yale in the pole vault and C. E. S. Gordon of Oxford in the high jump.

STURDY seems to be the only one sure of a first place on past performances. He is the only vaulter of the four entered who can top 13 feet. Pond of Yale can do close to 13, but the two Britons have yet to better 12

Engle will have his worries in the furlong with experienced competitors such as Baynes Norton and G Wilkinson running against him. And, again, Leigh-Wood will have Engle to battle over the quarter-mile distance.

Dave Cobb may upset the dope in the mile. Cobb proved a stout-hearted performer in the triangular meet last winter with Dartmouth and Cornell, winning both the half and the mile. Green, of the Invaders, has turned in better time than Cobb, but the Crimson stalwart will race him every inch of the way.

Jimmy Reid, Harvard captain, is going to run against a dark horse, L. Pumphrey, who seems to be a new find for the British. Pumphrey broke the Canadian record at Hamilton, Ontario, a week ago, with the time of 9.33 2-5 for the two miles. Reid can do 10 seconds faster and maybe more, if pushed. No matter how good Pumphrey may be it seems something of an impossibility to beat Reid and it should be the American from start to finish.

GORDON of Oxford carries the class in the high jump, as does Sturdy in the pole vault. Joe O'Gorman of Yale should win the weight event, but Caleb Gates, formerly of Princeton, has thrown the shot 44 feet.

Harvard is pinning its hopes on Penn Hallowell, a Crimson freshman, to win the half. Hallowell is practically untested in classy competition and he may falter. But the youngster has the stuff to win handily in this event if he doesn't become stagestruck.

Kesselhorst may be a double winner. The Yale captain-elect runs a sweet 100 and ought to be first over the 220 low timbers. Tom Mason, Harvard captain-elect, may upset the dope by winning one of the sprints. Mann of Cambridge is favored in the high hurdles, but there's a dangerous looking freshman, Eugene Record, on the Harvard team, and a fine Yale representative in Arthur DeVoe.

Every event will be keenly fought for and there will be thrill upon thrill for the attendants. The Britishers are here with the intention of winning and, customarily, outdo themselves on U. S. soil. So Harvard and Yale will have to fight like fury, and the gallery, meanwhile, should get quite a kick out of it.

VANITIE BEATS RESOLUTE

Kittery Point, Me., July 12—The Eastern Yacht Club cruisers had a fine run down the shore from Portland to this port. The fleet made the 42-mile racing under an almost cloudless sky with a light but steady southerly breeze blowing.

Gerald B. Lambert held the helm of his Vanitie in the run today from Portland, and with only Charles Francis Adams, Jr., as an afterguard, proceeded to hand the Resolute her worst defeat yet.

The Resolute had an early lead, but rolled too far off shore in rounding Old Anthony. That allowed Lambert to turn nearly a mile short of the Resolute. From that moment the Vanitie romped away and the race was settled. Her margin at the line was 25 minutes and 7 seconds, which was reduced to 23 minutes and 6 seconds on corrected time.

TWINS READY FOR BIG TEST

By BERNICE AND PHYLLIS ZITENFIELD

Fifteen-Year-Old Twins Training to Swim the English Channel

Dover, July 12 (Special Cable)—We are both joyful today because the temperature of the water has finally risen to 60 degrees.

We are particularly happy that our odious land training is over at last and from now on until the great attempt we do all of our work in the water.

Our swimming period has been gradually increased so that today we started the rout ne of six hours in the water, and even more.

In the morning we swam for nearly two hours, and in the afternoon for two hours more and we really wanted more, but weren't permitted to overdo it.

We are on our toes now and all set for the big trial swim as far as Shakespeare Harbor. That will be our first real test in the outside ice water since we have been over on this side.

Our trainers are praising that ultra splendid weather will keep up.

RIDERS FROM 4 LANDS IN RACE

Four different countries will be represented in the great Golden Wheel 50-mile race at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night. Three, George Chapman, Frankie Keenan and Victor Hopkins, will represent Uncle Sam; Franz Duelberg will be Germany's standard bearer, Al Letournier is French, and Italians are banking on Francesco Zaggaro Barbor. That will be the big attraction following the international championship next week The Winchester invitation is now so well established that bids are at a premium but unlike most of the contests of this nature, Winchester does everything in its power to make room for players, even those who feel late invitations.

If the players at Belmont Spring [illegible] the [illegible] of the play- [illegible] rules which they will be re- [illegible] led to take with them, the traffic is going to be jammed up to such an extent that between the rules, rough and missed putts, they will not be in a very pleasant frame of mind upon the completion of the qualifying rounds.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

For the first time since 1925, Francis Ouimet will compete in a state amateur championship. Ouimet will make a real championship out of what has been, in the minds of many, a near championship for four years.

Deep down in their heart-to-heart Freddie Wright nor Eddie Lowery, who have held the title since Francis allowed it to go by default feel that their opposition epitomized the real strength of the amateur ranks of the state Although they would have, if Francis and Jesse had been in the field

Russell Todd of Wollaston is one of the real live wires in Massachusetts golfing circles. Todd is a hustler and the revival of the old time interest in club tournaments at Wollaston has, in no small measure, been due to his untiring efforts. The Massachusetts Golf Association could make fine use of a man of the Russell Todd stripe

There was a fine turnout at both Scituate and Plymouth yesterday. From early morning until dark the boys were plugging around the courses, battling for the various prizes offered. It was one of the best days ever favored an "Either or Both" tournament

Just set your objective at 161 and you will be requested to be back at Belmont Spring next Thursday morning.

Ralph Rooks, the veteran Meiacomet player, took Brad Orcutt the defending champion, to the home hole in the quarter finals of the Rhode Island amateur championships. Rooks is one of the most popular golfers in New England and there were hundreds of well wishers in the Bay State pulling for him to break through at the Rhode Island Country Club

P F Rinaldo and W C Parsons did a nice job on Art Bolster and Tommie Leonard, a Dartmouth combination in the recent Nassau Rochester four-ball match. The Web Who Webs took it on the chin to the tune of 3 and 2—incidentally, Paul Sadler and Sam "Sonnenberg" Dearborn of Nashua had a 20 hole match to F. P. Libbey and J. V. Parsons, which gave Rochester the odd point.

Within a year there may be a desired change in the Belfiore Country Club course. There is talk of extending the 5th hole to the 6th green, erecting a 6th tee back of the present 5th green and building two new holes which will bush on the ocean side of the present 5th fairway.

The Winchester Country Club annual four ball invitation will be the big attraction following the international championship next week The Winchester invitation is now so well established that bids are at a premium but unlike most of the contests of this nature, Winchester does everything in its power to make room for players, even those who feel late invitations.

Wright of Robins May Be Out for Year

New York, N Y., July 12 (INS)—Glenn Wright, Brooklyn shortstop, is unlikely to throw another ball this season.

An x-ray has finally revealed that Wright is suffering from a fracture in the shoulder joint of his right arm. An operation, probably within a week, will be made in an attempt to correct the injury.

Horse Races Halted; 95 Men Guard Track

Cleveland, O., July 12 (AP)—Reinforced by 95 deputies assigned to watch the Thistledown race track, Sheriff E. J. Hanratty maintained his watchfulness over the track today while he awaited the outcome of his war on the contribution betting system.

Owners transferred their horses to Bainbridge park, across the county line, to continue racing there next week.

Hanratty's contest with the system is little short of a war. Armed with a machine gun, sawed off shotguns, tear bombs and pistols, he moved his forces in 17 cars against the track yesterday.

A short time after, Edward P. Strong, owner of Thistledown had anticipated his arrival and ordered it closed. He posted them as guards against use of the contribution system, and gave orders for them to report there again today.

Hanratty declared he would maintain the watch until cases now in court are settled and horse owners, unwilling to wait until the legality of the system is determined, moved to Bainbridge, where a 25-day meeting was ended a short time ago.

The contribution system was used there without interference.

U.S. CAR IN RACE AT DUBLIN

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 12 (AP)—The United States and five other countries are competing in the Irish International Grand Prix motor car races here at Phoenix Park, today and tomorrow.

There are two races, each for a cup and $5000 The race today is for cars with engines not exceeding 1500 cubic centimeters and the one tomorrow for cars with engines larger than 1500 cubic centimeters.

Each race is at 300 miles or 70 laps. Fifty drivers are entered. Speeds of 120 miles an hour are expected on the two-mile straight part of the open road course.

Capt Malcolm Campbell, who has lately returned from South Africa, where went in search of new speed records, is the chief British hope. He will drive his 3-litre supercharged sunbeam.

This is his last appearance in motor car racing before the returns to Africa to make another attempt to regain the world's land speed record recently won at Daytona Beach, Florida, by Sir Henry Segrave.

The United States is represented by a Chrysler.

GERMANY WINS FIRST MATCH

Berlin, July 12 (AP)—Germany scored a decisive opening victory over Great Britain today in the European zone Davis Cup tennis finals when Dr. H. Prenn conquered J. C. Gregory in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2.

The victory for Prenn, youthful German who only made his debut in Davis Cup competition last year, was surprisingly one-sided. Behind his terrific service, Prenn kept up a steady attack that smothered the Englishman, who won both his singles matches last year against Germany and is a veteran of four international cup campaigns.

Frankie Moore May Box Bud Taylor at Garden

GAGNON TO TRY FOR KAYO

Diamond Signed to Tackle Janco in Semifinal at Cycle A. C.

By RINGSIDE

MATCHMAKER EDDIE MACK of the Boston Garden has opened negotiations for a 10-round bout between Frankie Moore of Medford and Bud Taylor, Terre Haute boxer and former world's bantamweight champion.

Jake Zeramby was at first considered as an opponent for Taylor, but the latter does not care to mingle with southpaws.

Mack then turned to Moore, who is one of the best of the New England featherweights. The Medford warrior is a two-fisted thumper and always gives action. He recently scored a victory over Hy Diamond in a hectic battle at Fenway Park.

Moore recently went under the management of Johnny Buckley, who believes his new protege is headed for the fistic heights.

In the event the Moore-Taylor match is arranged, Andy Callahan will probably appear on the same card. The Lawrence 138-pounder has been bowling over all opposition and Boston fans are eager to see him do his stuff.

JACK GAGNON is entrenched at Sharon Gardens, where he is getting ready for his ten-round bout with Ernie Schaaf, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on next Monday night. Gagnon has been trailing the ex-gob for three years and now that he is going to get a shot at him he intends to get into the best possible condition.

Gagnon has always been rated as a heavy puncher, while he has improved as a boxer by working with Jack Sharkey and Riccardo Bertazzolo.

Gagnon says he hopes Schaaf makes good his promise to punch it out with him. In such an event Jack says he will crash through with a knockout.

HOMER ROBERTSON and Harry Smith will collide in the semifinal of 10 rounds. In an eight-rounder, Tony Shucco of the North End, who has won 20 fights in a row since turning pro, will meet with Larry Brignolia of Cambridge.

Frankie Stevens of Boston will oppose Kapreal Bagdasarian of Greece in a six-rounder. In the four rounders, Joe Stockman of Dorchester will take on Mike Rafaell of Sharon, Joe Sarno of the North End will take on Louis Namo of Halifax, while Joe Savolis of the North End will tackle Joe Russo of Revere.

BOB MILLS, New Hampshire heavyweight, does not make any secret of the fact he intends to flatten Big Boy Rawson once more when they collide at an Arena Club show at Fenway Park on next Thursday night. When Mills and Rawson met at the Arena, Bob got up off the floor three times to come on and win.

Harry Kelley is in charge of the Mills camps and says his protege will be ready to go on high next Thursday night.

Al Lacey, who is training Rawson, tips the world that Big Boy will crash through with a kayo win and convince everybody he is the best socker since Jack Dempsey stepped from under a box car.

HY DIAMOND of the West End has been signed to mingle with Henry Janco of Lawrence in a ten-round semifinal at the Cycle A. C.'s show at Revere on next Thursday night. Diamond and Janco should furnish plenty of action.

The ten-round feature will bring together Buddy Clark and Tommy Daly.

Leo Lermond to Race in Sweden

Leo Lermond of the Boston Athletic Association, national mile champion, is going to Sweden as a member of a team of Americans being recruited by Erik T. Kjellstron, Swedish athlete who has been representing Georgetown.

The party is expected to start within a week or so and will include, besides Lermond, Fred H. Sturdy of Yale, the nation's champion pole vaulter; Leo Sexton, Georgetown University's all-around star; Richard Rockaway, Ohio State hurdler; Reg Bowen of Pittsburgh, national and intercollegiate quarter-mile champion, and a sprinter to be selected.

It had been planned for George Simpson of Ohio State to make the trip, but his breakdown at Denver two days before the national championships last week make it impossible for him to go.

Mack and Fairbanks to Remain at Garden

HUNTINGTON B. (TACK) HARDWICK, president of the Boston Garden Club, today denied the New York report that Sheldon H. Fairbanks is to be removed as general manager and that Eddie Mack is to be ousted as matchmaker.

"The New York story is news to me," said Hardwick. "I believe that as president of the Boston Garden Club that I would know if any change in the office of general manager or of matchmaker were contemplated.

"Eddie Mack has a two-year contract as matchmaker and his work has been satisfactory. The Garden has made money on his boxing promotions and no change in the office of matchmaker is contemplated.

"The Garden is also satisfied with the way Sheldon H. Fairbanks has conducted things.

"William F. Carey, president of the New York Garden who is an officer of the Boston Madison Square Garden Corporation, will be in Boston next Monday to attend a meeting of the directors. He is not dissatisfied with the work of either Mack or Fairbanks.

GARDEN SUCCESSFUL.

"The fact the Garden is interested in sports promotions is the reason for the rumors. There are always rumors in regard to all kinds of athletics. But you can make it strong that neither Fairbanks nor Mack is going to be ousted."

When Sheldon H. Fairbanks was asked for a statement, he said:

"The talk about the Garden shakeup reminds me about Mark Twain's statement to the effect that the report about his death was greatly exaggerated.

"The Garden has done much better financially since it opened than was expected. There will not be any shakeup as the directors are satisfied with conditions.

"Eddie Mack, our matchmaker, has a two-year contract which has more than a year to run. His shows have been highly successful and there is not any reason why the Garden should desire to dispense with his services."

Mack revealed the boxing profit at the Garden has been $63,601. In addition boxing has netted the Garden $35,000 for rent, while it has paid $6,000 in rent to Braves Field.

MADE RECORD PROFIT

This is the greatest profit ever made by a Boston boxing club.

"The Garden staged eight shows during November, December and January," said Mack. "Its net profit was $27,808. In February, we put on two shows and made $6,554.

"In March two shows netted a profit of $15,603. The Garden lost $7,821 in April which was due chiefly to the injury suffered by Joe Dundee before his second bout with Al Mello.

"May showed a profit of $3,681, while the June loss was $1,424. The Risko-Cook bout cost us $3,814 while we dropped $2,980 on the Jones-McVey bout. The Jones-Mello show was a winner and reduced our loss for the month.

"In all, the Garden staged 18 indoor shows which paid a rental of $36,000. On the two Braves Field shows we paid $3000 on each as rental charges. We are under contract to pay the ball park $30,000 a year over a five-year period, but this contract was entered into before I assumed my duties at the Garden.

TWO-YEAR CONTRACT.

"The Routis-Zeramby bout netted the Garden a profit of $1500.

"I have an iron-bound contract with the Garden which has more than a year to run. Under the terms of the contract I receive $10,000 a year in salary and 10 per cent of the net profit of the boxing shows.

"At the time I was made an offer to become matchmaker at the Garden, I was doing a successful business with the Argonne A. A. I refused to accept the Garden job until assured a two-year contract. It is legal proof. In addition, Tack Hardwick and other officers of the Garden are satisfied with what money I have made for the Garden in the boxing game."

Walter Hagen Rated High by 'Joplin Kid'

By HORTON SMITH

United States North and South and French Professional Champion.

WITH Bobby Jones the 1929 American golf champion after four successive days of play at the Winged Foot Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., we professionals must grin and bear it, and pay sincere tribute to the magnificent skill of the Atlanta amateur who will undoubtedly be recorded in sports history as one of the greatest—if not the greatest—of all golfers.

Winged Foot brought woe to many of us pros, yet Al Espinosa, Diamond Shute, Gene Sarazen and Tommy Armour came in two-three-four-five order.

Your correspondent was fortunate to be eighth in the open with a total of 302 and my traveling teammate, Walter Hagen, just came "in the money" as sportsmen express it.

A number of readers have expressed the wish that I write some brief sketches of many interesting golf stars whom I have played with from Hawaii to Berlin, Germany, and back again to the United States.

It is but fitting that I start with Walter Hagen, because of all the golf stars, with the exception of Bobby Jones, Ed Dudley I know him most intimately.

JUST five years ago this summer, when I was 16 years old, I was permitted to caddy for Hagen when he played an exhibition match at my dear old Springfield, (Mo.), Country Club. I felt as proud as Babe Ruth's bat boy. His bag of clubs seemed as light as a feather duster. Of course, I refused the $5 caddy fee which he tendered, but I did take some balls which he gave me.

I know certain critics do not like Sir Walter because of his mannerisms, his playboy methods, etc., and some are so bold as to say "he will spoil you, Horton." I resent that latter imputation for though "The Haig" is a playboy an incorrigible "kidder," etc., he really is a firm friend and a marvelous help to a young fellow who still has a lot to learn about golf.

The veteran and this "Joplin kid" differ widely in temperament and tastes; but we team up well because we are both "on the level" and like each other. All that "leading astray" whispering is false and decidedly mean gossip—that I can swear to.

Now, I had never seen "The Haig" go to work until I saw him at Muirfield in Scotland at the British open last May.

ONE thing is certain, "The Haig" did not worry about his Winged Foot woes for he has his major title to the British open championship. Charley MacFarlane, a very careful Scot, who is not given to making many complimentary remarks, made this significant statement at Muirfield:

"At times, Hagen plays like a 10-handicap golfer, but at other times he becomes the most accurate striker of a golf ball in the world today."

KID CARTER TO BOX JANCO

Matchmaker Sam Price of the Marks Stadium of Tiverton, R. I., has arranged an excellent card for Monday night. In the feature event, Benny (Kid) Carter and Henry Janco of Lawrence will clash. They will travel over the eight-round journey.

Young Lefty of Fall River and Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge will meet in a return match, the semi-final of six rounds. They put up a furious struggle three weeks ago. Stanley Wynnerick of Lawrence battles Goodis Schwartz of Cambridge for six sessions and Irish Paddy Mullins of the Navy and Frankie Buff of Manchester and Jimmy Flores of Newport and Mike Tiano of Watertown meet in other six round events.

Cardinals Beat Allston A. A. 2-1

The Hoyt Cardinals defeated the Allston A. A., 2—1, in a six-inning game at the Russell E. Hoyt Field last night. N. McGarry was the winning pitcher for the Allston A. A., fanned eight Cardinals in the short game.

Braves Must Pick Up in Stickwork or Keep Tumbling

BRANDT ON MOUND TO HOLD REDS

By JOE CASHMAN

OUR Braves must step on it to keep out of the cellar. Having dropped two tilts in a row to the Reds, they are now but one game ahead of the last-place visitors.

With Maranville and Welsh back in action, the Tribe is at full strength for the first time since to furnish him, but it may be as well as when it was crippled.

The whole gang has completely forgotten how to hit. In the past two games the boys have collected just 11 safeties and two runs.

Naturally, that is a bad time and can't help continuing to trail until their stickwork improves.

SOUTHPAW ED BRANDT is down to do the hurling this p. m., which, incidentally, is Ladies Day. Brandt is about due to turn in a victory, but his mates will have to meet the apple a lot more frequently than of late for him to win.

And their chances of succeeding this fine afternoon seem any too bright, for Jack Hendricks has Zeph Jeppa Ripley, whose portsi slants have long puzzled the Tribesmen, primed to pitch.

A batting drill which Manager Fuchs has ordered for this morning, however, may sharpen the eyes of the natives sufficiently to find enough hits and runs to win in the afternoon.

MISTER HENDRICKS is not exaggerating any when he says that "Red" Lucas is one of the greatest hurlers in the game today, if what the former Tribal infielder showed in the second game of the series can be taken as a criterion.

A single by Bell was the only hit he allowed until the seventh, when, with a six-run lead, he gave two singles in a row. A fourth single in the ninth was the last the Braves made and they never threatened to score.

Red also contributed a double and single to the Reds' attack and knocked in two runs. Quite a valuable man to have hanging around.

"Socks" Seibold matched Lucas in effectiveness for a spell but the enemy got to him for four runs in the fourth and two more in the seventh, and he retired in favor of Cooney.

Like the majority of Braves' hurlers in recent games, "Socks" hurled well enough to win until he saw he didn't have a chance. Then he wilted.

THE more Hub fans watch the Reds, the harder it becomes for them to understand their lowly position. In this one at least, they are the most formidable looking, last-place outfit in history. They look even better here than the Giants, Cubs, Pirates and Cards.

Moreover, the Reds seem to lack the fight and confidence against their ... [illegible] ... Braves. ... [illegible] ... Without ... [illegible] ... but ... [illegible] ... which helps ... [illegible] ... are ... [illegible] ... have to extend themselves to win.

Judge Fuchs is getting a bit tired of it, and has ... [illegible] ... hired men that they must stop letting tossed around by the Redlegs ...

BODY STILL IN ADDRESS POSITION

Now your right elbow. As you start your clubhead back see to it that your right arm stays in close to your side, as in the address position, only the hands and forearms moving. Therefore, when you clubhead has been swung back some two feet—it will differ in distance with different players—your body still retains its address position. Practice that until it feels natural and easy for you to do it because right there is the secret of starting right—and the whole purpose of these lessons for beginners is to start you right.

Maureen Orcutt In Golf Trophy Finals

Eastern Point, Ct., July 12 (INS)—Maureen Orcutt, metropolitan champion and Edith Quier, of Reading, meet here today in the finals of the play for the Griswold trophy.

Playing magnificent golf Miss Orcutt yesterday annihilated Helen Hicks 7 and 5 to enter the finals. Miss Quier thwarted Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd's attempt to win the trophy for the third year in succession by eliminating her in the semi-finals, 3 and 2.

MOE LIKELY TO WIN GOLF TITLE

Mission Hills Country Club, Kansas City, Mo., July 12 (INS)—Don Moe, 18, of Portland, Ore., today stood in a fair way to win the 30th western amateur golf tourney.

Moe, who came as a sort of substitute for Frank Dolp, also of Portland, winner of the title last year, meets John Lehman, Garyville, today in the semi-finals.

Art Sweet, Chicago, meets Gilbert Carter, 19-year-old Nevada, Mo., lad and dark horse of the tourney, in the other semi-final match.

Lynn Fans See Baseball Game Free on Sunday

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

THE Lynn fans are in for a baseball treat Sunday when the gates will be thrown open to the public and everybody will be admitted to the bleachers free of charge.

Those wishing to go in the grandstand will be charged the usual 50 cents. The Lynn club is doing this so as to get some of the fans that have not been attending the games up at the Stadium so they can see what kind of ball the team has been playing. The attraction for that day will be Lewiston, one of the best teams in the circuit.

Haverhill is again at the top of the league by virtue of its victory over the Nashua club, while Manchester was losing. Lewiston went into a tie for second place when it took New Bedford into camp. Portland defeated Brockton again and went into a tie for sixth place with that team.

Four games are scheduled today with the feature contest at Haverhill where Tom Whelan's Lynn club will be the attraction. Nashua is at Manchester, New Bedford at Portland and Brockton at Lewiston.

Asa Small, an outfielder, twirled his second game for the Lewiston club, and held New Bedford to seven hits.

Russell, a young catcher who has been playing all year with the Whitney and Elwell Co. nine in the Bankers' and Brokers' League, is getting a tryout with Lewiston.

Duke Sedgwick, the Portland ace, won his 12th game of the year at the expense of the Brockton club.

Win Clark is doing a pretty good job with his Manchester club. When the season started he had three men left over from last year, Johnny Miller, one of the best pitchers in the league; Fred Lovely, a pitcher, and Charlie Schriver, a young catcher.

He signed up Solly Mishkin, a first baseman, who has played with Jersey City and Toronto but was released by those clubs because they had veteran first sackers. Clark then got a hold of Whitey Bowman, a hard hitting third baseman.

SOX HIT HARD; SCORE OFTEN

Detroit, July 12—Manager Bill Carrigan today is hoping his Red Sox will not again outdo their batting eyes, which they suddenly recovered in the second tilt with the Tigers. Sixteen hits for a total of 23 netted the Boston team 15 runs, 10 of which were made in the sixth session, in which Stoner was laid and Billings worse. The latter, however, righted himself after this inning and held the Red Sox to one run during the remainder of the game.

But hard as the Red Sox hit, it remained for a Detroit pinch to carry off the individual honors. Marty McManus ... [illegible] ... pped up to the plate five times and banged out two home runs, a two-bagger and two singles. Quite a day's work.

Carrigan had intended to save Bill Bayne for today's encounter, but he was forced to send the portsider in when the Tiger sluggers threatened to become too familiar with the benders of Jack Russell. That puts it up to either Charlie Ruffing or Ed Morris to attempt a second subjection of the Bengals.

The domestic help problem is solved by using a Wantmaster apartment and the help are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

$60,000 Race at Chicago Topic of Horse Fans Today

A card of seven fairly good races at Arlington Park today is not due to get a lot of attention from the railbirds. The running of the American Classic tomorrow at the Chicago track, $60,000 ... for three-year-olds, is the main topic of discussion.

The three-year-old class of the running horses, which seemed poor at the start of the current year, has developed a number of able performers, even though there is no outstanding horse in the lot.

Consensus of opinion now is that the fifty Rose of Sharon is the best of the three-year-olds and is a very good bet to come through tomorrow. However, no filly has beaten the class of the three-year-olds since Harry Payne Whitney's Regret won the Kentucky Derby among other races.

Blue Larkspur probably is the horse which Rose of Sharon must beat to win the race. M. Garner is to ride the Bradley horse, and that capable jockey on a smart horse such as Blue Larkspur, can thunder along close to the lead position in almost any race.

Clyde Van Dusen has been a disappointment in some of his races. However, if enough rain falls to make the going very heavy in the Classic, the gelded son of Man O' War is apt to slosh home to a win.

McAtee, riding Clyde Van Dusen, can get more out of the mount than any other rider in the country, as he has had experience with the horse before.

HOW TO MAKE UP, TOLD BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Gives Advice to Miss in Sad Dilemma

IRIS has written me a letter, asking how to "make up." Iris is sad, however, seeking advice regarding her complexion or cosmetics, but about a friendship.

Here is her letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax—I am a constant reader of your column and enjoy it immensely.

"My problem is this: I started going with a boy shortly after I had met him at a party, and continued to do so for three months. We did not quarrel but just stopped seeing each other. I was surprised because, although I could not keep a certain date with him, it was not my fault.

"I moved, and he called up my girl friend several times to get my address but could not at that time. About four months later he called at my home and we began our friendship again.

"One night I asked him his reason for not coming to see me, and though he did not care to talk about it, I gathered from what he said that he had tired of me. I hate quarrels, and, because of my affection for him, I let this go, feeling that it is rather easy to lose of anyone whom you see at least twice a week. Do you think I was right? Or should I have become angry?

"Do you think it pays to let a boy get away with mean sayings or actions in order to avoid a quarrel if you care enough about him to let it go? Does this cheapen a girl in the boy's way of thinking?

"We had good times together, but he never cared to hear about things I did or about my friends, unless to ask what boy I had gone with to a certain affair and then be jealous of him. If he loved me—and he said he did—would he necessarily have to be interested in my doings?

"I became angry at him one evening and so I haven't seen him for quite a while. And I was the one who would not make up then, would it be my place to speak to him if we should meet? How can I make up? How should I act if we chance to meet? I shall appreciate your advice very much."

I am glad that you enjoy reading my column, Iris, and I hope you will find my answers to your questions helpful. Some modern young man have an amazing way of saying, "I love you," without meaning more than a passing compliment.

Your friend likes you, but I fail to see that he has shown the slightest evidence of loving you. His jealousy of others' attentions proves nothing except a desire to dominate.

He went about with you for a while, showing interest, liking and a certain attraction, then he stayed away. Again, he renewed the companionship; again, he drifted away and gave you to infer, when you questioned him, that he was tired of seeing you so often. He takes little, if any, interest in you or your friends. Under the circumstances you surely cannot for one moment imagine he loves you.

Why should you resent this fact? Why should you be angry because he does not love you? That is not his fault—and probably not yours. It is not any evidence of meanness on his part. A young man cannot fall in love with every friend.

Merely take him lightly—as a friend and companion—not as a sweetheart. Continue to go about with others. Keep him for a friend, of course, as you do other boys you know and like. But do not read into his actions or words any significance that is not there.

You will not cheapen yourself by failing to take offense because he frankly is not in love with you. You will, on the contrary, by your good humor, show your poise and common sense.

How can you make up with your friend? In the easiest way in the world! Just bow and smile whenever you see him, speak to him, also if that seems the natural, tactful thing to do.

It does not pay to "let a boy get away with mean sayings or actions." A girl who has self-respect will show her annoyance and displeasure over any indignity of that sort. But be sure you really have cause to be annoyed, and are not merely suffering from piqued vanity.

In this instance, it seems to me you have done the sensible, friendly thing, Iris, in assuming a boy may tire of a girl if he sees her too often. So remain friendly, but do not permit the boy to see you sufficiently often to tire of you again!

Have I answered all your questions? I hope so! Common sense and a kind heart will help you solve those problems of friendship as they arise and will enable you to distinguish between a boy's undependable passing fancy and deep, true, loyal affection, which may one day lead to love and marriage.

Love, the Tamer

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

ON all sides you can hear her friends asking "What in the world has happened to Bebe? Once she was the very life of the party, always on the go, never satisfied to be still for a minute! But now—well, there's something the matter, for she's so sweet and demure and sort of settled. Wonder what's happened?"

If they'd only stop and think a minute they'd KNOW what had happened. Hasn't she fallen in love? Isn't she now engaged to the Dearest Man in the World? And there's the answer!

Love accomplishes miracles, and this is but one of the many. From a wild, headstrong girl, always in the midst of every gaiety, ever ready to do the most daring outre things imaginable, she has been transformed to her real, true self. The wild self, which everyone has known, isn't really Bebe. All it needed was the firm, guiding hand of Love to tame her and make of her the shy, sweet girl she really is.

It's not a harsh process, this taming which Love does. It's the sweetest thing in the world. She knows he wants her to be the dearest, sweetest thing in the world, and promptly she settles down and is just what he wants her to be. That's what Love does!

So if you see one who is seemingly wild and headstrong and untamable, don't worry! For Love will do what all the people in the world can never accomplish! Just watch and see!

KEEP UP YOUR ENERGY

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

STRIVE always for the best—Grade A, 14 karat, 100 per cent best.

The best, always, should be your watchword.

Be careful not to be satisfied with what is commonly referred to as "second best."

Try to achieve the best. Try to buy the best. Try to emulate the best.

Be the best worker if you can, or the best in your profession. Make the best, invariably the best, your standard of excellence.

Now we know full well that try as you will you cannot always be or have the best. Nevertheless, if you think in terms of the best and will have none of the second rate, you will come nearer and quicker to the goal of the superlative than if you allow mediocrity to satisfy you.

In this age of rush and bustle we are altogether too inclined to accept second rate for first rate.

As long as we get by, we are likely to rest content.

But this attitude soon leads to habit.

And when the habit of second best has gripped you, it is really a most difficult job to get out of the rut and achieve something really unusual and of superior excellence.

We are given to standardization these days and standardization is usually second best.

Witness the difference between a piece of furniture turned out by machinery by the thousands and a chair or table of genuine antique make that a workman spent weeks and months to carve, almost as a labor of love.

A machine-made, second best imitation of such a chair can be bought for a few dollars. But the genuine product brings hundreds of thousands.

It is hard, mighty hard, to keep one's standards high when others about us seem to be getting on with no special effort or ambition.

But unless we are dissatisfied with the easy way, unless we continue to strive for the very highest perfection in everything we do then we shall be unable to inscribe on our banners the magic word "Excelsior."

We must not envy those who have already arrived and made a name for themselves. In nearly every case they are the ones who would have none of the second best.

It was difficult for them too. They were beset by the temptations of the second best the same as we are. But they stuck it out. They kept the ultimate goal of their ambitions clearly in sight.

All of which we can do as well as they if we will but put energy to the task and will strive only for the very best possible.

SUMMER SALADS

WHEN you are planning your summer salads there are two good rules to remember, in addition to the fundamentals of crisp lettuce and chilled ingredients attractively prepared. Salads of fruits and vegetables should be served with meals composed mostly of starchy foods. When salads are made of meat, eggs, nuts, cheese or starchy vegetables they are intended to be served as a one-piece meal, and are balanced by bread and butter, a beverage and possibly a simple sweet.

One of our most recent food fashions is to use a salad as a first course at luncheon or dinner, taking the place of cocktail, soup or appetizer. This is really a commonsense idea because the family comes to the table hungry and with keen appetites they will eat all of their salad and so secure the needed vitamines.

Let me repeat, that the success of any kind of salad depends upon three operations, thorough chilling and seasoning. Salad greens should be washed in very cold water and thoroughly drained, then wrapped up carefully in a square of cheesecloth or put lightly in a cheesecloth bag and placed in the refrigerator. Molded salads should always be turned out on crisp and perfect lettuce leaves, and for special garnishes there are radish roses, celery curls, pickle fans, green and red pepper strips, cucumber slices, beets cut in fancy shapes, shredded lettuce, wedges of tomato and lemon slices. Do not dress your salad until it is ready to serve (unless you are going to marinade it) and do not grudge a few extra minutes to arrange it artistically. A most attractive and practical way of arranging a salad is to make individual salads on large lettuce leaves and then arrange all the servings on one large chilled platter.

Here are some specially appetizing salads:

TOMATO SURPRISE SALAD

1 tsp. grated onion.
1 tbsp. gelatin.
2 tbsps. cold water.
½ tsp. paprika.

Cook the tomatoes and onion 10 minutes. Add seasonings and strain. Add gelatin which has been dissolved in the cold water, mix thoroughly. Boil eggs hard, cut in halves crosswise, place yolk side down in individual molds first rinsed with cold water, fill molds with tomato mixture and chill till firm. Turn out onto bed of lettuce, top with mayonnaise and garnish with fancy cucumber slices.

CHICKEN CREAM SALAD

¼ tbsp. lemon juice.
1 tbsp. gelatin.
2 tbsps. cold water.
2 c. cooked chicken minced.

Soak gelatin 5 minutes, set over hot water until it melts. Add to mayonnaise, fold in the cream and remaining ingredients. Transfer to small molds and chill till firm. Arrange shredded lettuce on salad plates with slice of tomato in center on which turn out the mold, top with mayonnaise and garnish with pickle fans. Serves 6.

CUCUMBER AND CHEESE SALAD

To well seasoned cream cheese which has been worked smooth, add 1 pimento chopped fine. Peel and cut a good-sized cucumber in 4 lengthwise sections crosswise, remove the seedy portion, and pack centers with the cheese. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator and cut in thin slices and serve on lettuce with French dressing garnished with green pepper rings.

BEET SALAD

6 medium-size young beets.
½ tsp. salt.
1 tsp. vinegar.
1 tbsp. lemon juice.
Pepper if desired.

Clean beets thoroughly and boil till tender in water to cover, then drain, saving the liquid, of which there should be 2 cups. Peel and chop the beets. To the hot beet juice add gelatin softened in 2 tbsps. cold water, sugar, vinegar and seasoning. Cool till it begins to thicken, then pour over the chopped beets. Pour into square mold and chill till firm. Cut in cubes and serve on let tuce with mayonnaise, or individual molds may be used. Serves 6.

Faithfully yours,

AUCTION BRIDGE

By WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

Only One Way to Make Game.

Auction Bidding: South bids one Club; West, one Spade; North, pass; East, pass. South, holding six probable tricks, rebids his Clubs and West rebids Spades. North and East passing. South bids three Clubs, an overbid justified by his four honors. West and North passing. East bids three Spades, a sound assist after his partner's rebid. South and West passing, North bids four Clubs, an assist that would not have been sound had his partner not twice rebid.

East now gives his second assist in Spades, bidding four. East's probable trick holding is half a trick short of the values required for this assist. But this half chance of an added trick, which would produce game, justified the risk involved, especially as, even if the contract is set, gain might result through shutting the opponents out from making four odd at Clubs with a possible high honor score. The bid of four Spades secures the contract.

Contract Bidding: South bids one Club and West one Spade, North passing. East bids two Spades. While East's values are short of the full strength required for a first round raise, his holding would warrant an assist should his partner hold a rebid, so on the chance of such holding, East assists in order to keep the bidding open, justifiably, assuming that should he pass, South might also pass and allow the hand to be played at less than a game bid.

South passes. While he might rebid Clubs on the strength of his four honors, without risk of any serious loss, still he realises that with a passing partner game at Clubs is out of the question, hoping that the opponents will not continue to a game bid.

West, however, holding rebid strength, at once bids four Spades, which becomes the contract.

The Play: Declarer can count but nine tricks, even with a successful Heart finesse and a break of the outstanding trumps. The extra trick required for contract and game can be obtained only by establishing Dummy's Queen of Hearts as a trick. In order to do so, South must hold the King of Hearts, but twice guarded, so that the finesse of the Jack may win and the King fall on the third round.

Accordingly, declarer wins the first trick with Dummy's Ace of Clubs and takes the Heart finesse, winning with Jack and returning the Ace of Hearts.

Declarer then leads the king of Spades, upon which South's jack falls. Declarer is thus enabled on the second round of trumps to lead low and win with Dummy's 8. Dummy's return of a Heart establishes the queen. West, trumping, puts Dummy in with the ace of trumps, and Dummy's queen of Hearts then takes the essential trick required for game.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer American readers' questions on etiquette. Write to here, care of this newspaper.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Should a wedding invitation be answered? If so, what words should be used?

2. What words of congratulation should be written on the card that is enclosed with the wedding present?

Mrs. S.

IF the invitation is to the church ceremony only, it is not necessary that we answer it. But if the invitation is also to the reception, it should be answered.

This is the form, if you are accepting for the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mallory Bald accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Willard's kind invitation for Tuesday, the thirteenth of June at five o'clock

Write the acceptance on the first page of double-sheeted letter paper, and space as I have indicated.

2. It is unnecessary for you to write anything on the card if you enclose your visiting card, since a present arriving at this time carries its own message. However, if you wish, you may write (and it is perfectly correct, of course), "Best wishes and love to you both," or "Best wishes for your happiness always."

F. V. C.: There must be some way of formally meeting this young man. You must have some mutual friends in the same hotel. It would be very easy for your mother to inquire and find guests who are acquainted with the young man.

PERPLEXED: If you are to have a very small wedding, confined to the immediate families, I think it would be a little overdoing it to write notes to all of them.

If you are going to have somebody send out invitations, it would be well to have them done by a firm which regularly does this business.

APRIL'S SOWING

by ROSEMARY REES

Story of Mystery and Love in the South Seas

could hurt her most. "Gytha quite cut me out. He's her devoted slave now."

Mrs. Sterndale dropped in to tea with Gladys and, after a few desultory remarks, began to discuss Mrs. Brandon.

"Can nothing be done to stop this —this open scandal in Beverley?" she asked.

"What open scandal?" asked Sally's mother with a well-stimulated expression of interest.

"Surely you've heard of Doctor Stewart and this—this Mrs. Brandon?"

"What about them?" she asked aloud.

"They're living together."

"Yes," said Sally. "I'm so glad Alick has a good housekeeper at last."

"You—you—condone such things?"

"Alick having a good housekeeper? Why shouldn't I? I'm sure he needs some comfort. He works hard enough, poor boy, and more often than not forgets to send in his bill if he thinks his patients aren't too well off."

"But to have a housekeeper on those terms!"

"What terms? I haven't heard what wages he's paying."

"You're trifling with the question, Edith," remarked her sister-in-law sternly. "The fact remains that Alick Stewart and his housekeeper are living in sin."

Gladys Sterndale was confident that she herself was Alick Stewart's affinity. He might not know it yet. She resolved immediately that she would choose some hour when the doctor was in the country or at the hospital and, like Mrs. Royden, call and interview Mrs. Brandon.

It was a week after Sally's afternoon tea, that Gladys saw her opportunity to visit Doctor Stewart. He had been called away into the country unexpectedly and she had heard of it.

It was nearly midday when she rang the office bell and Mrs. Brandon answered it.

"Doctor Stewart is in the country," she said. "I really don't expect him back before lunch."

"I'll wait for half an hour, at any rate," returned Gladys; and Mary had perforce to admit her.

"You haven't been long with Doctor Stewart, have you?" asked Gladys, as Mary was moving towards the door.

Mrs. Brandon halted. "No," she answered, "only about five weeks."

"Such a pity that Beverley is so gossipy."

"Is it gossip? I didn't know." Mary's fingers were on the handle of the door.

"It's ruining poor Alick's practice."

Mary did not change color. She merely looked steadily at Gladys for a moment, and then with a slow smile—slightly contemptuous and wholly amused—she passed out of the door and closed it.

Gladys was left in a condition of boiling anger, muttering to herself that she'd get even with this high and mighty lady, she sat down to wait out her half-hour.

There were some old numbers of the Sketch upon the waiting room table, and she pulled them angrily towards her. Gladys was turning over the leaves now in quiet irritation when suddenly the paper seemed to jump up and hit her, for before her was a full length portrait of the woman who had just left the room.

Gladys read the caption at the foot of the picture.

"An indefatigable war-worker. Lady Mary Durant, wife of the South African millionaire, Colonel Durant, now with his regiment in Salonika. Lady Mary Durant is the daughter of the late Earl of Barrboro, and will be remembered before her marriage as Lady Mary Brandon, one of the three beautiful daughters of 'Lovely Lady Barroholm.'"

Gladys Sterndale's mouth had opened still a little more widely. So many ladies and an earl and a millionaire!

The feeling of awe gave place to one of hard vindictiveness. Gladys was secretive. She would keep the knowledge she had gained to herself, but she carefully tore out the page and placed it in her bag.

A few days later Mary had a caller. It was Hennessey, and she was unfeignedly glad to see him.

"I'm thinkin' this is more like the place for ye," he said: "and truth to tell I'm gettin' tired o' that place meself. It was a sad loss when ye left, and now Jim Carlyon's gone and I miss him more than I thought it likely."

"Gone?" she repeated. "Where's he gone to?"

"He bought McAndrew's place."

"I think he'd be glad to see ye," went on Hennessey unperturbed. "He seemed to mope a bit after ye left. He bought a few head o' cattle and some sheep from the boss' wife, while I was away, he tells me, though I didn't know it yet. She received immediately that she would choose some hour when the doctor was in the country or at the hospital and, like Mrs. Royden, call and interview Mrs. Brandon.

It was a week after Sally's afternoon tea, that Gladys saw her opportunity to visit Doctor Stewart. He had been called away into the country unexpectedly and she had heard of it.

Gladys was turning over the leaves now in quiet irritation when suddenly the paper seemed to jump up and hit her, for before her was a full length portrait of the woman who had just left the room.

But into your secrets, but why don't you marry her whoever she is."

"No country doctor should marry."

She moved impatiently. "I've heard you say that before, and it's so foolish."

"Why is it foolish? What have I to offer to any girl? I've very little money and very little leisure. Think of the dreary life she'd have with me."

"Why should it be dreary? Do you think money makes a woman happy? It may bring happiness to a dressed-up doll—but to a woman of flesh and blood, and of soul and spirit, it's a man's love that counts. Have you any right not to offer it to the girl you care for? Mayn't it be the one thing in all the world that she's breaking her heart for, too,—your love?"

"And when she wanted to go to race meetings, and polo matches and bridge parties, and dances, and I'm hard at work up at the hospital, or in the country, or on the coast, I'd have to agree to let some young fool of a lad more her age agree with her. I'm a jealous sort of devil, and I should hate that like hell."

"Why should she want all those things without you? Doesn't it occur to you that she might choose rather to be interested in your work?"

"I've a big practice, but it's not a very paying one."

"Money! Money!" Again that note of passion was in her voice. "Doctor Stewart," said Mary suddenly serious. "You're working far too hard."

"Hard work is the best possible medicine."

"For what?"

"For everything. For ennui, and for aching hearts, and megrims, and the blues."

"And which are you suffering from?"

"All four," he answered after a momentary pause.

Mary paused for a moment, and then taking her courage in both hands, continued, "You're in love, Doctor Stewart."

"You're the wise woman of Whangamatai," he returned. "Who am I in love with?" She shook her head.

"I don't know that, you hide it too carefully, and I don't want to

Mrs. Royden, and found Sally and Joan in the drawing-room.

Sally remarked innocently, "Please tell Doctor Stewart, Mrs. Brandon, that we're feeling rather offended with him for not coming. He never comes to see us now."

"Please don't tell him anything of the sort, Mrs. Brandon," drawled Joan. "If he wants to come, he won't have to be asked."

Sally had arranged that Mrs. Brandon should drive home with them, and as they all walked out to the car together, Mrs. Brandon found herself beside Joan.

"You know Doctor Stewart very well," began Mrs. Brandon. "Couldn't you prevail upon him to take things a little more easily?"

"I don't think anything I could say would have the least effect," replied Joan with a short laugh.

"I think it might have more effect than everything anybody else could say," said Mary quietly.

Joan turned to her quickly and met the candid, open gaze of those beautiful dark eyes.

She had flushed as she met Mary Brandon's eyes, and then she went very white.

"Why do you say that?" she asked in a low voice.

"Because I think it's the truth," answered Mrs. Brandon. "He works hard because he's unhappy."

"Why should he be unhappy?"

"I think he loves some girl and believes he would be spoiling for great a sacrifice of her to ask her to share his life."

The following day the community received a shock for news came that Jim Carlyon had been arrested and brought to Beverly by the police to answer to a charge of cattle stealing.

He was committed for trial and Stewart and Sally furnished bail, at the end of that horrible day when the Beverley paper announced his committal for trial at the next sitting of the supreme court, many talked of the case to Stewart.

"What has he done exactly?" she asked.

"Done?" echoed Stewart, "the poor devil hasn't done anything except deny the charge."

"Isn't it better if people plead guilty?"

Stewart got up from the table with a slightly impatient movement. "I don't know anything about that, of course," he answered, "but I do know that he's not guilty of this charge; and Hawk Heaven there's someone else in Beverley who agrees with me, and that's Mrs. Sargent. We're going to get him off between us, and we've got the cleverest lawyer in Beverley—Ellis Weldon—for his defence. Carlyon seems almost dazed. He stuck to his story that he bought the stock from Mrs. Bayliss, but he has nothing to prove she sold it to him, and she, of course, denies it."

The words struck suddenly somechord in Mary Brandon's memory. Where had she heard a phrase like this? Ah, yes! Mrs. Bayliss herself had said it. That night on the beach. "If Jim takes the stock . . . who's to prove I sold it to him?" That was what she had said. Mary had forgotten those first words in what had followed. She had no clue then to their importance, but now the sentence was illuminative.

She swung round and faced Stewart, her eyes blazing. "He didn't do it! He didn't do it!" she said. There was a curious note of joy in her voice. "I know now. I remember—on the beach I heard Mrs. Bayliss talking to Brett. It's Bayliss and his wife and Brett and Ayres and Wiremu—they're the thieves—those four. Wiremu was there after they'd killed the Friesian." . . . she could scarcely speak for her excitement. Things that had been vague before leapt to her mind now with an amazing clarity. How could she ever have believed the man she loved guilty of so sordid a crime? Faithless to her, perhaps, but not a criminal! And she could clear him!

And it must have been there—in the Gorge Valley—through the secret tunnel—that they hid the stolen sheep and cattle.

"The supreme court sits in another fortnight," said the doctor at last. "With you as a witness I don't think we ought to have much difficulty in getting Carlyon off."

"I can't . . . I can't." Her voice was no more than a whisper.

But she knew she would go on the stand just the same. Her self-possession did not desert her when she entered the witness box.

All Beverley—at least as much of Beverley as could gain admission—was crowded into the big court room.

She was sworn as Mary, widow of the late Colonel Paul Durant, and known in New Zealand as Mrs. Brandon.

That was the first sensation! Brandon, then, was not her name!

Sally and Joan had secured seats in a far corner, hoping to escape notice, but Gladys Sterndale—who had watched for hours outside the court, determined to be in at the death as it were—was sitting well in front of the gallery.

At the first hint of Mrs. Brandon's connection with the case, Gladys had hastened off to Alfred Curtis, a lawyer friend with her information, and the illuminative portrait. Happily Gladys meant to marry Stewart, she had no objection to encouraging Curtis in the meantime. Once on the scent the lawyer had found out many things.

Gladys had no especial desire to see Carlyon convicted; though she supposed he ought to be if he were guilty, but she did undoubtedly look forward with a certain amount of anticipation to a dramatic scene in court, and to the humiliation of a woman who had attempted to snub her.

Evidence for the prosecution had been given—by the police and, apparently somewhat reluctantly, by Mrs. Bayliss.

She did not wish to incriminate anyone but—there have been occasions when Carlyon had been absent from the hotel for days together. She found it hard to think that he could be guilty of such a crime; she and her husband had always been fond of him in spite of the fact that he had always been a ne'er-do-well.

Mary took her story clearly. She was very pale, but to Stewart's relief she showed no emotion.

All the points of her evidence had been verified before the case; the secret tunnel visited; even the skins of the Friesians exhumed.

Mary's evidence was electrifying; the case seemed practically over for the prosecution. Carlyon must be acquitted—but they had yet to receive the crowning sensation.

The Crown accountant's cross-examination was short, and failed to shake her evidence, and then Curtis rose.

"Is this a reproduction of one of your portraits?" he asked and passed up to Mary in the box the page which Gladys had torn out

RUSSIA STILL LEADS WORLD IN KILLINGS

Moscow, July 12 (AP)—Murder and suicide are both on the decrease in Soviet Russia, but the taking of human life is still greater here than in Western Europe, and probably even greater than in America.

There are few statistics to go by, but the newspapers carry daily accounts of murders. In city and country, and often on a rather large scale. The number of village correspondents alone who have been killed in the last year or so runs into scores.

They make it their business to report upon bribery, official malfeasance and other unpleasant conditions, and often they pay for their candor with their lives.

Imprisonment for a few years is the usual punishment reserved for what the Reds consider more serious offenses—counter-revolutionary activities, bribery, espionage and the like.

HEAVY CASUALTIES.

Dr. L. L. Leivovitch, chief medical expert of the commissariat of public health, is authority for the statement that murders and suicides have become fewer, but accidents and injuries resulting from violence are increasing, he said.

Half a million persons, according to his figures, apply to doctors each year in Russia after being beaten or injured in accidents. The majority of them, he said, were "more or less intoxicated."

"This figure can easily be doubled to get at the true number of injured, inasmuch as full half the people who are hurt do not go to doctors," explained the health official.

RUM IS BLAMED.

"In rural districts, injuries are mostly due to beatings, family brawls and village rows, but in the larger cities 40 per cent of the injuries are attributable to the dwelling crisis, which has caused so much overcrowding of many families into apartments meant for one family.

"Through all these statistics passes the red thread of alcoholism, which has been proved in Russia to be the inseparable companion of crime."

When "land" next appeared, we waited to see whether it wasn't just another trick of the land and clouds. It was.

After we had landed at Santander, the officials and local authorities turned up one after another and almost choked us with their kindness and effusive attentions.

They kept us busy nearly all night, when we most wanted rest. We slipped into bed at about 4 o'clock and were up again by 8, trying to get the ship ready for an immediate start.

But the time taken to get the Pathfinder overhauled and refitted delayed our departure till 11 o'clock. At the last moment, the women, with all their feminine enthusiasm, stormed around the plane, throwing flowers at us and crying "good luck." They nearly mobbed us again.

We longed at the moment to be in the sky, less dangerous than the ground, where we knew fears for our ship which might be demolished by the enthusiasm of the amiable and excited peasants and their wives and sweethearts.

But finally, after the last "goodbye" we took off, and our last view of Santander Beach, thronged with waving and shouting Spaniards, created a profound impression.

The clouds no longer troubled us. The Pyrenees were a vision of glory to our right, with the vast sea and the lofty peaks.

Gradually we picked up altitude, but not enough to lose sight of the picturesque landscapes of the rocky shores girdling the Bay of Biscay.

BOTH CHEERY AGAIN

As we fixed our course toward Rome, along the northern slopes of the Pyrenees, we decided to enjoy the panoramic view, since the worst of the ocean crossing was passed. We were cheerful as could be.

We first aimed the nose of the gold old Pathfinder straight for Marseilles, which suddenly flashed into view in the distance like a brilliant mirage to the north. There was a wide, inland lagoon, with green, olive-grove lined shores, and to the south was the lovely blue of the Mediterranean.

Tricked by Sky

Capt. Lewis A. Yancey, navigator of the Pathfinder in its epochal Roman flight, who declares that "land mirages in the sky almost got him off his bearings when he and Williams were flying across.

Marseilles seemed the picture of some fairyland, and we wanted to hop right over it—but, writes Yancey) my chum, Williams, who was at the stick, always having his eye on the point-over line —of a forced landing, which is not on the tops of roofs and steeples for safety—decided against it.

As we sailed outside of the port of Marseilles, we saw a French naval squadron going through their maneuvers. Our ship must have appeared to be a strange intruder, and an officer, perhaps with suspicion, pointed his field glasses skyward to see who we were and where our ship hailed from.

We passed out of his sight soon, however, and decided that then we would follow the Riviera for a while.

After Marseilles, it was just plain and delightful sailing. We continued along the Mediterranean, which gave us a friendly reception, without wind-squalls, and with just enough clouds to make the scenery picturesque.

CORSICA LOOMS

For some time we saw only the blue expanse below us. Then—the end of an island, which we recognized as Corsica, birthplace and native land of Napoleon. Then, after another bit of sea, we saw another island, which we believed to be Sardinia.

The outlines, however, were dim, as night was now settling. We sailed again with only the aid of our compass (writes Williams) was a good mariner. He was on the lookout for the first lighthouse along the Italian shore, which soon blinked at us with a friendly greeting about one hour after the sun had dipped into the sea.

Then suddenly we saw the big picture of a glorious light, illuminating the sky in the distance—illuminating the heavens for 30 miles around.

It was the lights of the Eternal City—Rome—welcoming us. That was our big thrill.

We steered straight for our glorious goal, and flew over Rome in several circles at an altitude of 3000 feet. We plainly saw the searchlights playing up to us, and knew that the men on the ground were handling their instruments with perfection to guide us down.

We descended after twice circling the field, slowing up and avoiding a fast taxiing landing to meet the excited and waving crowd. We feared we might hit somebody with the propeller, but all was okay.

GLORIOUS WELCOME

We landed at what we thought was the far edge of the field, but the thousands waiting for us swarmed around instantly.

We were surrounded, greeted and cheered by the wild crowds and an outburst of joy gleamed in every face.

They gave us a glorious welcome. It was the conclusion of our dream of two years, completed after two years of patient, hard planning, and studying and striving, with the idea of completing such a flight that would land us in the Eternal City and enable us to bring a message of friendship from the American to the Italian people. Added to this (writes Williams) is the fact that Yancey was glad to arrive in the country of his wife, who is a full-blooded Italian.

We have a special message to Pope Pius from Cardinal Patrick Hayes in New York, which we will present to His Holiness when he is able to receive us.

Our reception in Rome was just like coming home. We did not feel that we were coming among strangers. We were carried about and congratulated everywhere, joyfully.

As soon as we landed Under Secretary of the Air Ministry Italo Balbo came rushing towards us with both hands outstretched to welcome and congratulate us in the name of the Italian people and Premier Mussolini.

We could hardly hear a word that anybody said with all the cheering and joyful greetings from the hundreds who tried to press around us. The throng included many distinguished persons, Americans as well as officials from Rome. We learned to our regret that Premier Mussolini had been waiting for us for an hour and a half, but that he left the flying field just a few minutes before we appeared.

FEEL LIKE HEROES

But Signor Balbo and Gen. De Pinedo, two of Italy's glorious airmen, insisted on driving us at once, as soon as we could get away from the crowd, by special orders from the Duce, to his residence at Torlonia Palace.

We received the warmest and most friendly reception from Il Duce.

He patted us on the shoulders and greeted us in Italian. Then he began speaking in good English, his face expanding in a broad smile as he expressed his joy and offered us compliments on our achievement.

The dictator repeated again and again that we must be the guests of the Italian Government, refusing to allow us to be entertained by anybody else.

Now as we look back we feel something like heroes and course we can hardly be blamed for this with all the cheers and enthusiasm that have been showered about us.

Probably the most thrilling experience of our flight was when in the midst of our 20 hours of blind flying over the Atlantic. (Now Williams is writing) I was verifying our instruments while Yancey was at the wheel. All the instruments registered perfectly, the motor action, oil, and time piece measurements were perfect, yet the moon kept up a lively dance around us. To the right and left, afore and behind it went, and I was forced to shout to Yancey—"what are you doing?"

He instantly saw that we were dropping in a headlong stunt down to the sea at the rate of a hundred feet per second. He straightened the lever and brought the ship to a balance from our perilous tail spin and the moon suddenly resumed its right behavior like our ship.

Our trip over the Atlantic was the first one in which a full log of the whole voyage was kept. The notes were made by Yancey, an expert mariner, who noted the currents, direction of wind, visibility, and all points which are useful for the weather bureau and future navigation.

Our scheme, and the reason for the name of the Pathfinder for our good ship, was to lay out a route for regular service from America to Rome and return. We believe now that from our experience a regular and perfectly safe practical route can be established for ships to sail the air from New York, Bermuda, the Azores to Rome in three stages, following a slightly northern ellipse across to Europe and then by a southern ellipse around by the Azores and Bermuda on the return voyage.

We hope that by our flight we have established a precedent and our next purpose is to prepare and carry out for ourselves our scheme in the next year, proving it by regular flights.

STEWART HAS HIS EYE ON FLYING

Camp Devens, July 12—A two weeks vacation in London and Paris with all expenses paid, is the treat to which J. Chester Stewart of Hardwick, Vt., Boston University graduate, and Edward J. Bullard, R. U. freshman, are looking forward next month.

These student soldiers became buddies in camp as a result of Stewart's winning a scholarship offered at R. U. by the father of young Bullard. The scholarship was for the student who made the best scholastic and college activity showing under financial and other handicaps—in other words, the boy who was up against the most difficulties but pulled through with colors flying.

The award is intended as a cultural training period for the winner who has just finished his course at the College of Business Administration. The donor is D Irving Bullard of Edgartown Mass., retired banker, who was first president of the Colonial Air Transport. His son will enter the university in the fall.

This summer young Bullard is a rookie, aged about 18 years. He learned of the award to Stewart and hunted him up. As a result, the two became friends and decided to take the trip together.

Stewart's greatest ambition is to enter commercial aviation, especially from the administrative end. His military and university training should equip him well. In addition to this, he spent four months at the army flying school in Brooksfield, Texas.

The young officer will receive his commission as second lieutenant in the reserves soon. After his trip to Europe he hopes to enter the service of the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation of Newark, one of the outstanding aircraft organizations.

While in college Stewart worked his way through by "all sorts of jobs," yet he was popular and had ranks above average. He was elected to a social fraternity and to the honorary military unit Scabbard and Blade.

"This trip to Europe will mean much to me," confessed the young officer, "for I intend to put most of the time in studying cultural Paris and London. We expect to fly from London to Paris, and intend to examine several airports and plane factories."

Funeral Services for L. P. Winchenbaugh

Funeral services were held today for Lester P. Winchenbaugh, first president of Boston Rotary Club, and first governor of New England Rotary Club, at his home in Dana ave., Hyde Park, followed by burial in Fairview Cemetery, Hyde Park.

Mr. Winchenbaugh was in the wholesale paper business in Lincoln st., Boston, for many years. He leaves a wife, two sons and a daughter.

Rev. E. G. Wesley Dead

Providence, July 12 (AP)—Rev. Ernest George Wesley, 82, who during the last 60 years held pastorates of the Methodist Episcopal and Free Baptist denominations in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, died at the home of his daughter.

'Alky' and Auto Gas Cause 'Lack of Pep'

Portland, Ore., July 12 (AP)—Persistent consequences of the influenza epidemic, the main effect of the World War, bad alcohol and an atmosphere saturated with carbon monoxide, due to increasing automobiles, were blamed today by Dr. C. Dowden, Louisville, Ky., for the constant complaint of the American people of exhaustion or "lack of pep."

Dr. Dowden, at the American Medical Association convention, said that only about one in five persons complaining of exhaustion have a specific underlying disease.

Although, the doctor said, "lack of pep" could be caused by any number of causes, he was convinced most exhaustion was caused by mental depression as a result of emotional, financial or business worries. He dwelt at length on the alcohol phase.

"Men, and women, both," he said, "are consuming more bad alcohol at present than at any other time in history and bad alcohol is very conducive to brain fag and lack of energy."

Dr. Joseph M. Wilder, Chicago, and Dr. Frank N. Allan, Rochester, Minn., in papers read in a section-al meeting, showed that the remarkable effects of insulin in the control of diabetes and the disastrous results of failing to use it properly are widespread.

"Now that insulin is available," the paper stated, "deaths from diabetic coma should not occur."

Dr. Clarke Sheppardson, San Francisco, said insulin treatment has not only lengthened the lives of sufferers, but has greatly reduced the possibility of developing hardening of the arteries.

ARREST BANKER IN FLORIDA

Jacksonville, Fla., July 12 (AP)—While state and federal officers began reorganization or liquidation of three Florida banks, the president or four other central Florida banking institutions faced charges of violating the state banking laws.

Two of the banks that closed were in Deland, the only banks in that city. The third institution was the Colonial Bank and Trust Co. of Miami.

John L. Fouts, arrested on an information filed by State Solicitor Hardin Whitten, Orange county, was president and director of the State Bank of Bartow, the First National Bank of Kissimmee and the State Bank of Winter Haven.

The information charged he "loaned himself $5000 from the funds of the State Bank of Bartow without consent of the directors, altered the minutes to make the loan appear regular, and took the money when resources of the institution were not of legal requirement. The banks he headed closed May 15.

NINE OUT OF 10 HAVE MEASLES

Washington, July 12 (AP)—Nine out of ten of America's population have had measles and about three-fourths of the population has had whooping cough.

The number of those who have had mumps and chicken pox come next in a report published today by the United States Public Health Service.

"In every instance the maximum fatality occurs during the first year of age," he report asserted. "The fatality of measles, whooping cough and mumps declines to an almost negligible percentage by five years of age, but the decline for scarlet fever and particularly diphtheria is by no means as great as in the case of the other three diseases."

Tom Patricola Falls for Hollywood Lure

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service).

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12—Tom Patricola, late of the George White "Scandals," came to Hollywood. He saw it and it conquered him. He will remain among us until he plays an important role in two Fox pictures, one "Married in Hollywood" and the other "Words and Music."

"Married in Hollywood," admittedly from a Strauss operetta, features Norma Terriss and J. Scott Murray, also from the broadway musical comedy stage. Marcel Silver is the director.

"Words and Music," by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan and Jack McEdwards, has James Tingling as a director. Lois Moran and Helen Twelvetrees are booked to furnish the feminine interest.

Dear me, I forgot to say Tom Patricola is credited as the creator of that one time famous dance called "Black Bottom."

IT has been suggested that I am fanatically opposed to stage folk succumbing on the territory of our film stars. That's all poppycock. I am for the actor and actress who makes good whether he hails from the Bronx or from Gay Paree. Naturally, most of the film players are new to me and we are mutually interested in our friend's success. Here is one stage favorite who seems to have taken to Hollywood like a storm. Joan Bennett, the youngest of the Bennett sisters, daughter of Richard Bennett, has signed for a long-term contract with John Considine, Jr., and I hear tell United Artists has big plans for her. John first saw her in the stage production "Jarnegan" and recommended her to Samuel Goldwyn. Result—a successful appearance in "Bull Dog Drummond" opposite Ronald Colman. Now she is headed for stardom.

I PROMISED Benny Rubin if Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer really signed him as writer and director I would see that his pluh got proper recognition. Confidentially, I didn't believe M. G. M. were going to sign him, but he landed them, so regarding him a job, I don't understand how he does it. As I once said, 50,000 picture fans can't be wrong, and that's the number that used to applaud him when he was master of ceremony at Loew's State Theater, Los Angeles I suppose, now, 6,000,000 fans can't be wrong. That is the number I hope for and expect will cry for his comedy. (Not at it.)

WHERE they are and why they are there is answered briefly as follows:

Louis Wolheim is still on United Artists lot, where he is playing a pal and fellow convict opposite Ronald Colman in "Condemned."

Walter Houston is on his way back to New York after completing a role in the "Virginian." He will open in an Arthur Hopkins play in New York called "Commodore Trunnan."

Robert Ellis is to play the same type of role that he had in "Broadway" in "Tonight at Twelve" for Universal. He will not play opposite Laura La Plante for good reason known only to Universal and to himself.

TRAVEL notes—Victor McLaglen is on his way to New York, Chicago and other cities in the interest of "The Cockeyed World." It is his first vacation in five years, and he is taking all his best clothes to give the fans in these towns a treat. Mrs. McLaglen and the two children are in England but Victor, with only a month's vacation, hardly thinks it cross the pond in that length of time.

Fay Compton, who played opposite Adolph Menjou in "Fashions in Love" has returned home to England. I am rather surprised at that because I thought she had especially good diction in the films and that she would be kept in Hollywood.

Jack Buchanan having completed his work in Irene Bordini's picture, Wanted for Big Game, next week. Before he leaves Hollywood he will do a number for Warner Brothers' Show of Shows. He manages a theater in London.

Fay Bainter, in San Francisco with her husband, Reginald Venable, has been much interviewed here. Several people in San Francisco ask me why Miss Bainter has not been booked for the movies. It does seem strange with Hollywood picking on the stage as well known stage folk, that she has been neglected. Perhaps I can answer that. Miss Bainter did have a test made and I hear there is a possibility that she will make a picture as soon as she finishes her engagement with "Jealousy."

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random by an observer: Myrna Loy back in Hollywood with a new crop of freckles after spending some time at the beach. Frank Fay appearing minus 20 pounds. Mrs. Peyton inquiring whether he has been 18-day dieting. Leatrice Joy giving the summer cooling a thorough trying in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hotel all dressed in white. The Jack Blaines, Lilyan Tashman, Edmund Lowe and others at one of Los Angeles' new night clubs. Jack Warner watching the final scenes of Irene Bordoni's picture at the old Vitagraph studios. Jack Cohn entertaining the visiting Columbia film sales force. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Citizens of America, Repel THIS Invading Army

The Mediterranean fruit fly has made its appearance in Florida.

The terrible significance of this statement does not seem to be appreciated.

If it were stated that a Japanese army had invaded one of the states of the Union and had begun to devastate that state and would soon proceed to devastate other states of the nation; if it were further obvious that this army would destroy one of the chief food products of our people, a product which our people as a whole depended upon for health as well as nourishment; if it were clear that this army if not promptly expelled would wreck great national industries, abolish great export trade and levy hundreds of millions of dollars of yearly tribute on the country, the whole nation would be aroused and would proceed to attack and expel the invading army with every resource at its command.

But all the things which have here been pictured as the result of invasion by an imaginary Japanese army will surely happen as a result of actual invasion by the Mediterranean fruit fly.

There is no doubt as to what this army of flies will do. The direct destruction described above has already been wrought in other countries which have not expelled the army.

France, Spain, Italy, Northern Africa are almost denuded of fruit, and all the great industries dependent upon fruit and fruit juices and the canning and drying of fruit are in process of destruction.

Furthermore the fruit fly is said to attack vegetables as well as fruit, and other danger lies in the development of its destructive activities in that direction.

In Europe when you get a fruit nowadays you merely get a nest of worms and larvae.

The only fruit which is free from contamination is hothouse fruit, where the fly has been rigidly excluded by screens. For this hothouse fruit you pay a dollar for a peach and fifty cents for an apricot.

Imagine what would happen—what will happen to the fruit of this country and the industries of our nation dependent upon fruit if our fruit supply would be limited to hothouse fruits. Imagine the deprivation our people would endure if plums were six dollars a dozen and peaches twelve dollars a dozen and the cost of dried or canned fruits in proportion.

You say, perhaps, that you would get along without fruit.

Very well, are you also going to get along without vegetables? If you can get along without your plum pies and peach cobblers, and fruit juices in your soda water and fruit flavoring in your ice creams, can you also get along without your peas and beans and cauliflower and egg plant? Can you also do without your lettuce salad and your sliced tomatoes?

Citizens, the destroying army is advancing. You cannot afford to revel like the people of Babylon while Cyrus' army walked through the gates and plundered the city.

Get your government busy, busier than it is.

Write your Congressmen.

Write your Senators.

Tell them to stop wasting time and talk on unimportant matters and to take steps to stop this invading army.

Tell them instead of TALKING so much about protection to DO SOMETHING to protect the American fruit industry.

Tell them while they are talking about helping the farmer to HELP HIM KEEP HIS FRUIT ORCHARD AND HIS VEGETABLE GARDEN, and tell the President, too, that you are not so much interested in the appointment of postmasters as you are in the creation of an adequate force TO FIGHT THIS INVADING ARMY TO THE DEATH AND EXPEL IT FROM THE COUNTRY.

There are a lot of historic gentlemen sitting on bronze horses in the various public squares of the Capitol who do not deserve monuments any more than the man will who defeats this devastating army of flies and drives this scourge, this destroyer of wealth and welfare, out of the country.

In this warfare—much more important to the world than most of the wars which are waged—you can do your bit.

DO IT, and do it NOW.

British Championships

And Some, More Important

(Copyright, 1929)

The British are supposed to worry, and feel ashamed, because foreigners nearly always win the "Open Championships" on British soil. The British Tennis Championship for men was recently competed for by two Frenchmen, and won by one of them. The British competitor did not count. And two California girls, Helen Wills, of course, one of them, conquered all the British women.

Intelligent Britishers are not disturbed by foreign victories with ARMS and LEGS.

Only victories of the HEAD count.

Germans winning open championships in industrial chemistry and Americans holding the championship in mass production of automobiles, farm machinery, etc.—those are the really important championships.

And those are the things that worry Great Britain.

If the British Islands possessed a city like Detroit, turning out millions of automobiles a year, the wise British would not worry about Helen Wills' "poker face," the wonderful legs and arms of the Frenchman Cochet.

ONCE-OVERS

Don't keep complaining about the wrinkles in your face.

Your wrinkles came from the way you used your face except in cases where illness and suffering caused them.

Those wrinkles tell your life story.

If it has been of the right sort, the wrinkles will not be ones of which you need be ashamed.

But if they have come as result of dissipation or the gratification of desires they are your own making.

Nature exacts a toll for continued hardships placed upon her.

Some persons are so anxious to avoid wrinkles that they refrain from laughing and give as little facial expression as possible to any emotion they may have.

It is a heavy price to pay for a smooth face.

Possibly it is worth all it costs to those who enjoy having such rare faces, but such a face becomes more like a mask.

Leopard Turns Man-Eater

A Malignant Look

(Copyright, 1929)

HE'LL EAT NO MORE MEN

This leopard formerly lived and enjoyed himself in the wilds of Borneo. Now he lives a changed life.

The Hutt expedition captured him in a bamboo trap, after he had terrorised many villages, killing the inhabitants, especially old men and women who move slowly and feeble children.

A spotted leopard, this individual weighs 125 pounds, once he takes to man-eating, is more dangerous than the tiger. The leopard, being smaller, creeps up more silently, has great agility and is infinitely more cunning than the heavy tiger beast, his cousin.

Living among the Dyak pygmies, he enjoyed himself until white men, with a cunning greater than his own, came along with well-made traps and caught him.

You will be interested in the way of transporting a leopard without hurting him and with safety for those that carry him. His front legs and hind legs, shoulders and hips are strapped to a long pole. The leopard roars and snarls, with blazing eyes, but cannot hurt the natives that bear his weight at either end of the pole.

You will rarely see a look of more malignant hatred than that on the face of this animal.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, July 12—Thoughts while strolling: Wonder how a man comes to take up soloing on the xylophone? Beautiful mounted police horses that nuzzle passersby for sugar. Robert Warwick's red lapel flower. Tragic old fellows who sit on park benches boasting of authority they know is gone. Lillian Gish's eyes.

Sudden puffs of wind that rush crashly through cross streets. Debonair worldlings who scratch matches on signet rings. The Chinese laundrymen who slip-slop along with arms in wide sleeves. Humming nasally, Chrystal Hearne the celebrated actress, who married an equally celebrated editor.

Achmed Abdullah, a Paris, France, boy, who made good in the city. A bird sings lustily on a skyscraper window—poor little fellow. Wish I could have Paul Whiteman play "Till We Meet Again" every night for dinner. Overheard from a cigar store phone booth: "Operator, I've given you the best years of my life."

A brass sign polisher touches up a policeman's badge. Gilbert Seldes has "discovered" Ted Cook. So? Stubby French umbrellas with carved wooden handles. Who are members when they gave liver wurst? Hamish and Aimee McCalman. Lee Shubert, worth 25 million, not reputed the loneliest man in town.

The shudderv atmosphere on the cellar "take lunch." Hard to find black bean soup in this village. Jack Lait, the most prolific of all newspaper writers. And a grandpappy. Andy Tombes, the comedian and pride of Ashtabula, O. Edna Millay with her head knocking the stars.

What happened to those nuts hounds who talked songs? Harry Acton, who meets the ships with pencil poised. Taxicab hackers who don't care. Eddie Dunn, who at 70 is one of Broadway's niftiest dressers. Liner officers window shopping on shore leave. Four poms on a single leash—and all yapping.

East Side foreigners who wear wide black hats, black four in hand ties and dizzy toned handkerchiefs. English women who say, "Ah, Delicious!" Whatever became of the candy filled lanterns they sold on trains. Red heads in green hats. A parchesi tournament. Is there no limit to the city's hellishness?

Edward Paramore, Jr.'s suggestion for the theme song for The Well of Loneliness is She's Funny That Way.

The cigar store wooden Indian sign is a distinctly sought after prize by collectors. A toney art journal recently featured a page of ads from those who seek them. The choice selections are those hand carved in the early period of the last century. Some are worth $900 to $1,400.

He was dapper, faintly rouged and habited in an autumnal brown with a soft pink cravat. As he mneed across the sidewalk in his mignon way from a hotel entrance to the curb a group of idlers gave him the well known "bird." A $25,000 make auto with a plum liveried chauffeur drew up. "All right, boys," he chirped, stepping into the car. "Laugh this one off!"

Bernard Sobel, Ziegfeld's ballyhoo professor, asked for a drink of water in a speakeasy cafe the other evening. In about ten minutes the waiter returned with: "All the boys back in the kitchen enjoyed your joke. What'll you really have?"

A metropolitan editorial writer boasts of writing a full column of editorial every day for five years. Piddlesticks. Those of us "Simon Legreed" on yap dailies wrote several times that for years and also turned the press, set type, helped with the mail and "knocked down" a few subscriptions on the side.

We had exciting moments, too. There was the day Elmer Bixer waited for a cut to decorate the southeast corner of an inside page. The engine arrived and the $15 Hocking Valley disputed right of way with a cow and was three hours late. Elmer slipped a perfect plug of Star tobacco into the gap. And we made the mail.

From a boxing academy: "We have a new instructor with an amazing assortment of punches. Won't you drop around for a short tryout with him as our guest?"

No, thanks. I'll just sit it out.

Listen, World!

ELSIE ROBINSON

I KNEW a woman who moved from 57th st., New York, to 165th st. and nearly died from homesickness.

Instead of greeting such a chick-livered exhibition with the snickers and snoots it deserved, her friends promptly rallied round and said how terrible it must be for poor dear Mae to leave the street where she'd been born and "go way off where she didn't know a soul."

I know another woman who has wrecked the lives of two daughters and a son by insisting that they stay in the Dear Old Home with Momma and Poppa. In their early 20's these young people were all anxious to "launch out for themselves, but every time they suggested going Momma threw a fit and made them feel that they were making the mistake of their lives if they left the maternal roof. Their natural rebelling, coupled with her yelps, did the trick. The three of them are now well in their 30's and have about as much initiative left as a bunch of old tooth brushes.

Is this mother criticized for her selfishness? I should say not! She is both envied and praised for her feat in "keeping the family together."

"HOME, SWEET HOME"—WHAT ATROCITIES HAVE BEEN COMMITTED IN THY NAME!

If there's any institution that needs a lot of debunking it's Home Sweet Home.

HOME MAY BE A HEAVENLY HAVEN WHILE YOU'RE A YOUNGSTER, BUT, SAVE FOR OCCASIONAL VISITS, ALMOST ANY OTHER PLACE IS BETTER FOR YOU AFTER YOU'RE TWENTY-ONE.

The distress and indignation which parents feel at the thought of their children leaving home isn't love—although they honestly think it is. It is selfishness—one of the end products of an artificial way of living. A sparrow has a healthier attitude toward its young than such parents—it boosts them out of the nest when the time has come to fly.

As for homesickness, instead of scorning it as we would any other form of cowardice, we have made a virtue of it. Fine natures are expected to be homesick as they are expected to be patriotic or honest or pure. Homesick humans always get a sympathetic hand from bystanders. They shouldn't.

WOMAN WHO CAN'T MOVE FROM FIFTY-SEVENTH TO ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIFTH STREET WITHOUT "DYING FROM HOMESICKNESS" ISN'T A SUFFERING SOUL—SHE'S A GREAT BIG CRY BABY.

AND A HOME THAT RAMPS HUMAN DEVELOPMENT ISN'T SWEET, IT'S BEETIC.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR HUGS BAER

Just when we were figuring whether to eat a dab of watercress or fan ourselves with an ostrich fan of parsley we read the scientific but uncomfortable information that man eats almost 200 pounds of meat every year.

Every citizen eats his own weight in meat every 13 months.

The worst of it is that it's a lot of bologna.

The embarrassing detail about scientists is that they spout their indicted information at the wrong time.

When the weather . . . hot they dish up their heavy, woolen winter facts. Why don't they give us some cool, alpaca conversation about mint juleps and laughing waterfalls?

There is no R in the month of July. Therefore we should limit our diet to quick sales and small profits.

There is no W in the month of August no matter how you pronounce it. This month should be devoted to lettuce leaves and calf money.

Men do not eat 200 pounds of meat a year because we eat lamb chops. In order to get an ounce of meat from a lamb chop you have to nibble on a ton of lamb's elbows.

A man could live on lamb chops all his life and still be a strict vegetarian.

There is a little more meat on a pork chop. But even at its best any kind of a chop is something like a Chinese orchestra. A lot of strings and very little music.

Deriving nourishment from a chop is even more difficult than finding the Azores on a vest pocket map.

Trying to nibble at the meat on a chop is something like peeling bark in the petrified forests

We do admire a big, corpulent sirloin steak with the gravy breaking in roars on a rock-bound shore. But July is too hot for anything like that and we wish the scientists would go back over their books and give us the answer in chocolate sodas.

Who wants to eat two cut. of frankfurters when the temperature is muttering in its socket and even the hoss flies have decided to walk for a while?

Why do butcher chops close on Saturdays during June, July and August? Because even cannibals are living on bivalved and swimming in one-piece rain barrels.

July is no month in which to be educated. The schools closed in June. Why don't the scientists close up shop and give the adults a holiday?

Thars should be a law against intelligence during the airedale days.

If the average man eats 200 pounds of gristle and meat we bet that he does it for Thanksgiving to Washington's birthday.

And we hope that scientists have not included the wing and the neck of the turkey which falls to the lot of average man. Anybody who claims a turkey wing is meat could probably dine heartily on an autographed banjo.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

A LOT of love might be saved from sudden death, if brides and bridegrooms would start out with less self-determination, and more real determination to avoid the THIRD RAIL on the domestic track.

Self-expression is, of course, a beautiful thing, when it doesn't mean grabbing all the road and crowding the OTHER fellow off.

Marital harmony is largely a matter of learning what not to say and when not to say it—of picking your way around those fatal contacts which lead to argument and discussion.

Nearly every bride suffers a few painful shocks before she wakes up to the fact that there are certain subjects which she simply can NOT mention, much less discuss, with her husband, without starting something.

That there are certain sore and tender spots, which she cannot touch without making him wince —or growl, or roar—according to his nature.

That he has certain prejudices, which she can never hope to change; certain convictions, which are as deep-rooted as his eyeteeth, and to which he clings with the same tenacity.

And certain antagonisms, which are like live wires to bring about, waiting for somebody to step on them or pick them up and START something!

Likewise, every bridegroom is apt to discover that his most innocent remark on his wife's nose or her clothes, his gentlest and tenderest joshing on the subject of her accent or her mother or one of her pet mannerisms, will make her sizzle and go off like a firecracker.

Just sparks from the matrimonial third rail! But they can leave a bad scar, and sometimes cause a conflagration which reduces the whole beautiful house of your dreams to ashes.

Even a man BLINDLY in love should be able to see when he is treading on a woman's sensibilities, or touching her vanity in a sensitive spot, or grating on her pet complex.

And even a moron should be able to perceive that there are certain spots in a man's nature, that can no more be changed than the leopard's spots, and that her only chance of happiness is to step around them as carefully as a dentist drills around an exposed nerve.

No matter how smooth or beautiful or serene any human being's disposition may be, there are always certain crossings in it where "No Trespassing" signs should be erected.

After all, the matrimonial track is a double one, with the third rail ever present between you. Don't step on it, and you'll escape a lot of shocks, and find the going much smoother.
